Accountability Statement

The 2002/03 – 2004/05 Ministry of Children and Family Development Service Plan was prepared under my direction in accordance with the Budget Transparency and Accountability Act. I am accountable for the basis on which the plan has been prepared. The plan was developed in the context of the government's New Era commitments which are to be addressed by May 17, 2005. All material fiscal assumptions and policy decisions as of January 28, 2002 have been considered in preparing the plan and I am accountable for achieving the specific objectives in the plan.

The Honourable Gordon Hogg
Minister of Children and Family Development

Minister of State's Accountability Statement

I am the Minister of State for Early Childhood Development and under the Balanced Budget and Ministerial Accountability Act, I am accountable for achieving the following results for 2002/03:

- Establish a measure for the proportion of kindergarten aged children who are “ready to learn.”
- Establish one early childhood development learning site per region to foster the integrated planning and delivery of early childhood development.
- Establish urban Aboriginal early childhood development programs in 18 communities.

Ministry of Children and Family Development

The Honourable
Gordon Hogg
Minister of Children and Family Development

I am pleased to present the plan by which the Ministry of Children and Family Development will serve the people of British Columbia for the three years from 2002/03 - 2004/05. This plan outlines the direction the ministry will take to address the commitments of the New Era document and other identified priorities of government.

The ministry has five primary service areas. Four of them offer direct service to clients: adult community living; youth justice, child and youth mental health and youth services; early childhood development and special needs children and youth; and child protection and family development. The area of corporate services, program and regional management is the fifth service area, which provides infrastructure and support to the other four.

The goals, objectives and performance measures we have set in each of these areas are outlined in detail in this document. These were developed with three key principles in mind that will guide our implementation throughout the coming months and years:

- The right and primary responsibility of families to protect and support the growth and development of children and youth
- That government must acknowledge and reinforce the capacity of communities to support and enhance the resilience of children and families
- That the Ministry of Children and Family Development should provide the minimal intervention necessary to ensure the safety and well-being of our most vulnerable community members.

The ministry will be moving forward with six strategic shifts (Page 4). These shifts generally reflect moves to more openness and accountability, and to community based delivery of many of the services currently offered by the ministry. Our move to a new approach will result in social programs which produce measurable results that empower vulnerable children, families and their communities toward real and positive changes in their quality of life. We will work in partnership with communities and agencies over the next three years to fully implement these shifts. For that reason, I must emphasize the transitional nature of this service plan.

Ministry of Children and Family Development

Challenges include the necessity to meet government's budget targets, significant legislative change, workforce adjustment, attracting family care homes able to offer care for developmentally disabled adults, and supporting communities and First Nations to assume a greater role in governance and service delivery.

I have great confidence that emerging community leaders and new regional authorities will work with us to develop flexible and innovative programs and services. We will also be seeking the advice of international leaders in the development and delivery of social services. Together we will build a system where decisions are made at the community level to build the capacity of individuals, families and communities in British Columbia.

Strategic Context

Vision

The Ministry of Children and Family Development envisions a province of healthy children and responsible families living in safe, caring and inclusive communities.

Mission

Our mission is to promote and develop the capacity of families and communities to:

- care for and protect vulnerable children and youth; and
- support adults with developmental disabilities

Principles

The following principles guide the ministry in its work:

- We believe in the right and primary responsibility of families to protect and support the growth and development of children and youth.
- We believe that government must acknowledge and reinforce the capacity of communities to support and enhance the resilience of children and families.
- We believe that this ministry should provide the minimal intervention necessary to ensure the safety and well-being of our most vulnerable community members.

Ministry Role and Mandate

The Ministry's role and mandate is to:

- Advance the safety and well being of vulnerable children, youth and adults.
- Advance early childhood development through strategic investments.
- Advance and support a community-based system of family services that promotes innovation, equity and accountability.

Planning Context

Demographic and social trends, and the condition of the provincial economy, greatly influence the demand for the ministry's programs and services.

Approximately one quarter of the estimated four million people in British Columbia are children and youth between birth and 18 years.

Fifteen per cent or 132,000 of British Columbia's children and youth live in poverty, according to Statistics Canada's Low Income Cut Off (LICO). The percentage of children admitted into the care of the ministry, coming from families receiving income assistance, has remained around 65 per cent over the past decade. Fourteen per cent of all families with children at home are headed by single parents, compared to the 60 per cent of children in care who come from lone parent families.

There has been a significant growth in the number of children in the care of the ministry. The total number of children in care increased by approximately one third, from an average of 7,700 in 1996/97 to an average of 10,250 in 2000/01.

The Aboriginal child and youth population is growing much faster than the non-Aboriginal child population. Between April and September of 2001, on average, 40 per cent of children in care were of Aboriginal ancestry.

According to current ministry figures, we delivered community child and youth mental health services to approximately 11,300 clients in 2000/01. This figure does not include clients of contracted agencies, which account for 50 per cent of this program budget.

For the same fiscal year, there was an average count of 290 youth in custody centres, and 3,200 youth on probation. The monthly average number of youth in custody decreased by about 27 per cent from 1996/97 to 2000/01, and the average number of youth with probation orders decreased by approximately 28 per cent over the same time period. However, the teenage population is expected to increase relative to the total child population over the next several years, and this may place pressure on these program areas.

Increased demand for services has resulted in increased staffing, particularly for children in care. At the same time, rising unit costs per case have contributed to a substantial upswing in the costs of service delivery.

Improvements in medical technology have enabled persons with developmental disabilities to live longer. This has added pressure to the lifelong services that we deliver to these clients. In addition, as aged parents are less able to care for their adult children, and as special needs children mature, caseloads are anticipated to increase. The ministry funds Residential Services (continuing care) and Training and Support (day programs) for adults with developmental disabilities. Between 1996/97 and 2000/01, this client group grew by about 20 per cent, from 6,800 to 8,250. If this trend continues, we can expect a 4 per cent to 5 per cent growth in caseload per year.

The ministry provided services to approximately 16,000 children with special needs and their families in 2000/01, ranging from infant development, to respite, to child and youth care workers.

The ministry has in excess of 15,000 contracts for services with agencies and individuals, involving about 17,600 staff and 7,400 individuals providing family care. Until recently, growth in services has focused on the use of contracted agencies rather than a family care model for the provision of services.

The Munroe Agreement and Accords, covering five years from April 1998 to March 2003, have increased wages for unionized sector employees. They have also led to demands for similar increases from non-unionized agencies contracted by the ministry to provide services. This is the major factor affecting increased costs of service delivery.

It is clear that, in times of fiscal restraint, the current level of service to meet the specialized needs of the ministry's wide range of clientele is not sustainable without a radical shift in service delivery mechanisms.

The challenge for the ministry will be to deliver services effectively and efficiently, by developing service delivery models which provide optimum choices and flexibility within available resources.

Strategic Shifts

In 2001, the ministry reviewed its mandate, services and programs to ensure that they were focused to meet government's economic, fiscal and social objectives. The result was the identification of six key strategic shifts:

1. To open, accountable and transparent relationships.

The first strategic shift involves a more open and transparent relationship with staff, the media, community partners and the public. Many people viewed the previous ministry as one with a closed, reactive and defensive culture and a negative relationship with the media. This shift supports front-line workers by allowing them to be more consultative in their approach to supporting children and families.

2. To enabling communities to develop and deliver services within a consolidated, coherent, community-based service delivery system.

The second strategic shift identifies characteristics of the current system that need change. In the past, government has tried to build large, standardized, bureaucratic responses to challenges that exist at the individual and community level. Social programs that are delivered locally, wherever possible, in ways that best reflect the community's needs and strengths are more likely to achieve positive, effective results.

3. To making strategic investments in capacity and resiliency building and providing funding for programs and services known to work. Capacity, in this context, means ability and potential. Resiliency is the ability to recover from challenging situations. The ministry believes that individuals, families, and communities have the capacity to successfully face and overcome challenges, provided that they are given the opportunities and necessary supports to build and integrate this capacity.

The third strategic shift sees resources deployed with an outcomes-based approach, with evaluation measures built in. The belief is that funding decisions must result from evidence-based research, and be fully accountable to the public. For example, early childhood development programs are being benchmarked so that progress toward goals can be regularly and publicly accountable.

4. To promoting family and community capacity to protect children and to support child and family development.

This strategic shift sees the ministry investing in building the capacity of families and communities to deal quickly and effectively with challenges in protecting children, and children and family development. Emphasis is placed on recognizing and building on the strengths of families and communities. Consistent with the ministry's vision is the obligation of society to protect children who are abused or in danger. The ministry's responsibility includes providing the least disruptive intervention necessary to advance the safety and well being of the province's most vulnerable children. Better outcomes may be achieved by placements with extended family, long-term family friends or families in the same community.

5. To a community-based service delivery system that promotes choice, innovation and shared responsibility.

This shift recognizes those who know best what services and supports are required to assist persons with developmental disabilities to independence — the adult, their families, their caregivers and their communities. The ministry believes that the funding for this area could be used much more effectively if the system offered choices to families, to communities, to private and community sector partners.

6. To building capacity within Aboriginal communities to deliver a full range of services with emphasis on early childhood and family development.

This strategic shift sees the ministry investing in building the capacity of Aboriginal families and communities to deal quickly and effectively with challenges in protecting children, and in children and family development. As in other communities, Aboriginal communities must be supported to deliver the full range of services that support their children, families and communities.

As the ministry proceeds with its work, these strategic shifts will guide our plan implementation.

Ministry Primary Service Areas

Five primary service areas support the ministry's goals and objectives.

1. Adult Community Living Services:

Provides residential and day programming support to adults with developmental disabilities. Residential services (continuing care) are provided in family care settings, semi-independent living, and in staffed resources. Training and support programs (day programs) include self-help skill development, supported work and home support.

2. Youth Justice, Child and Youth Mental Health, and Youth Services:

Youth Justice programs promote rehabilitation by providing services to those incarcerated in youth custody centres, and funding for a range of community-based alternatives to custody, including day programs, intensive supervision, alternative measures and community services. Child and Youth Mental Health services include operation of the Maples Adolescent Treatment Centre, youth forensic psychiatric services to the courts and clients, and community mental health programs ranging from prevention to intensive support and treatment. Youth Services provides programs for at-risk and sexually exploited youth, including support workers, prevention and promotion services, and youth agreements.

3. Early Childhood Development and Special Needs Children and Youth:

Early Childhood Development encourages the development of healthy children, preconception to age six, in order to prevent further problems that would subsequently require more intensive interventions. Special needs services provide child and youth focused, and family support programs and interventions that promote healthy development and functioning of children and youth, to optimize lifetime opportunities and assist families in their role of primary caregivers. Early childhood development services will remain a strategic priority of the ministry. Specific attention will be paid to Aboriginal communities.

4. Child Protection and Family

Development: The Child Protection Program carries out the province's responsibilities under the Child, Family and Community Service Act, to ensure that children found to be at risk of harm are protected from further abuse and neglect, and to promote the capacity of families and communities to support children. The program administers the children in care residential program, including foster care, contracted facilities, and independent living, and finds adoptive homes for children permanently in the care of the province. Family development programs ensure that families whose children are at risk of harm receive the necessary support services. Changes to this area will be sensitive to the needs of families. New measures are intended to reduce the average cost per child in care. They will also reduce the number of children in care from the current 11 per 1,000 population, to closer to the national average of nine per 1,000.

5. Corporate Services, Program and Regional Management:

Corporate Services and Program Management provides overall direction, development and support for ministry programs, including support for all regional operations. This includes policy and legislative support, intergovernmental relations, audit, performance management and related research functions, administrative services, and financial and decision support services.

The area will also provide support for the establishment of new governance structures, with appropriate public accountability mechanisms.

Goals and Objectives — 2002/03 – 2004/05 Service Plan

Performance measures are evolving as the ministry's needs and resources change. As such, the measures will continue to be refined to reflect the ministry's and government's priorities and to take advantage of all new performance information, as it becomes available.

Goal 1 — To promote an environment where adults with developmental disabilities can participate in and contribute to their communities and live a full and valued life.

We believe that adults with developmental disabilities should have more opportunities to realize their dreams and make a contribution to society. They can experience increased independence and a fuller quality of life when they are supported by families and caring communities. The ministry, families and communities will need to work in partnership to create a system that will better meet the needs of adults with developmental disabilities through shared responsibility, individual choice and innovation.

Primary Service Area: ADULT COMMUNITY LIVING SERVICES

Objective 1.1: To establish a sustainable community living system that supports the needs of adults with developmental disabilities, their families and communities.

Strategies

- 1.1.1 Work with the community to develop and implement a new governance and service delivery structure for adult community living services.
- 1.1.2 Provide supports and incentives to maintain as many adults with developmental disabilities as possible in their families' homes or semi-independently in their communities. The ministry will introduce a range of funding options for families to better meet their needs, including individualized and direct funding.

- 1.1.3 In partnership with communities, and ensuring transition planning, increase the use of family care model homes.
 - 1.1.4 Establish client-centred, cost effective, specialized residential resources for adults with developmental disabilities who have complex needs.
 - 1.1.5 Ensure transition planning for children with developmental disabilities when they reach adulthood.
 - 1.1.6 Ensure that limited resources are dedicated to those adults with developmental disabilities who have the greatest need by introducing a provincial, standardized eligibility and assessment process.

Goal 3 — To improve family capacity and improve readiness to learn for children under six, including children with special needs.

Primary Service Area: EARLY CHILDHOOD DEVELOPMENT AND SPECIAL NEEDS CHILDREN AND YOUTH

Objective 3.1: To promote early childhood development as a key strategic investment.

implement early intervention strategies that meet their needs.

Strategies

- 3.1.1 Build community capacity to develop and deliver co-ordinated early childhood development supports and services that are based on community composition and needs.
- 3.1.2 Support Aboriginal communities to work in partnership to develop and

- 3.1.3 Enhance parental education initiatives to assist parents in having opportunities that enhance their responsibility to make the most of their children’s development.
- 3.1.4 Develop partnerships with the private sector to broaden community involvement and capacity for early childhood development initiatives.

Objective 3.2: To target evidence-based, individualized services to those children with special needs and their families who most require them.

Strategies

- 3.2.1 Review all programs and services to ensure that limited resources are committed to interventions known to work.

Ministry of Children and Family Development

- 3.2.2 Develop the capacity of families to support their children with special needs by moving to a focus on family development services rather than generalized family supports.
- 3.2.4 Increase choice by introducing individualized funding to families for some services such as services for children with autism.
- 3.2.3 Target family development programs to those clients in greatest need, by establishing restricted eligibility criteria and a new rate structure.
- 3.2.5 Refocus existing programs to better meet the needs of Aboriginal children with special needs.

Performance Measures and Targets

Measure	Baseline	2002-03	2003-04	2004-05
a) Rate of children with special needs that are in the care of the ministry (per 1,000 children with identified special needs)	144 per 1,000 (Fiscal 00/01)	137 per 1,000	130 per 1,000	123 per 1,000
b) Percentage of children in care through Special Needs Agreements	10.6% (Fiscal 00/01)	To be determined	To be determined	To be determined

Goal 4 — To promote an environment where the most vulnerable children and youth are protected and supported by families and communities.

Children can experience an enhanced quality of life when they are supported by their families and caring communities. Changes to this area will be sensitive to the needs of families. The ministry will work in partnership with families and communities to create a model that will better meet the needs of children by increasing a family’s capacity to care for its children through family development programs.

Primary Service Area: CHILD PROTECTION AND FAMILY DEVELOPMENT

Objective 4.1: To promote and support the capacity and responsibility of families to protect and care for their children.

Strategies

4.1.1 Review current family development programs to ensure that limited resources are committed to programs, which show evidence that they increase a family’s capacity to care for its children.

4.1.2 Refocus tools and supports to increase the role of the family in addressing identified risks to a child in ways that keep children within their immediate and extended families.

4.1.3 Develop and implement a family conferencing model as an alternative to the court process, reducing the number of children coming into care by Court Order.

Goal 5 — To plan and deliver services in the most efficient and effective manner.

Primary Service Area: CORPORATE SERVICES, PROGRAM AND REGIONAL MANAGEMENT

Objective 5.1: To develop and implement community-based governance models that promote choice, innovation and shared responsibility.

Strategies

5.1.1 Oversee the establishment and implementation of new community-based delivery systems to increase the effectiveness of services delivered within the community, including strategies to meet Aboriginal child, family and community needs.

5.1.2 Establish province-wide standards and identify outcomes for locally delivered programs to ensure that fundamental services are delivered consistently throughout the province.

5.1.3 Establish public accountability and performance management mechanisms for new governance structures.

5.1.4 Create designated regional directors of child protection, and regional deputy directors' offices.

Performance Measures and Targets

Measure	Targets
a) Progress towards implementing community-based governance structures	To be developed, with the intent that regional governance and service delivery structures are in place in 2004/05.

Objective 5.2: To develop and implement an organizational structure that supports government and ministry priorities, and optimizes public service renewal.

Strategies

5.2.1 Develop and implement a workforce adjustment strategy to meet the priorities and goals of the ministry.

5.2.2 Facilitate an orderly transfer of human resources to new community governance bodies.

5.2.3 Develop and implement the following administrative plans in order to facilitate an orderly transition of services to community governance:

- Information Resource Management Plan (IRMP)

- Financial Management Plan (including Regional Allocation Model)

- Public Accountability Framework

- Human Resources Management Plan (HRMP)

- Capital Plan

5.2.4 Work collaboratively with other social policy ministries to co-ordinate service provision, and to identify and respond to new, ongoing and emerging issues.

5.2.5 Review ministry legislation, and related standards and policies, and improve efficiency of service delivery through a one-third reduction of the ministry's regulatory requirements within three years.

Ministry of Children and Family Development

5.2.6 Amend existing, or create new, legislation as required to achieve ministry goals.

5.2.7 Implement shared services for finance, systems and other administrative functions consistent with government policy, and assist government with the implementation of consolidated services for human resources.

Victoria Youth Custody Centre — This $13.9M project will replace the deteriorating and inefficient Pembroke Street 42 bed remand and sentenced facility, which is the primary detention centre for Vancouver Island. The project is presently under construction and will be completed in June 2002.

Burnaby Youth Custody Centre — This $23.22M project (presently in pre-planning stage) will replace the existing aged and inadequate 144 bed Burnaby Youth Custody Centre, which is the largest remand and sentenced facility serving the province, principally the lower mainland.

Information Resource Management Plan (IRMP)

The ministry will plan and implement strategic technology solutions to improve the value of government information and services to citizens. This will be achieved through electronic service delivery, providing opportunities for citizen involvement, and technology tools supporting information sharing and program delivery.

This will include a performance management system which enables us to monitor the outcomes and effectiveness of our services. The systems will be designed to enable us to successfully implement the mission and strategic shifts identified in the ministry service plan.

A number of e-Government initiatives have been initiated to transform the ministry from being closed, reactive and defensive to a culture that is open, accountable and transparent. These initiatives include making caseload data and planning information available on our public web site; establishing an electronic media room with the most up to date information about current ministry issues; exploring and developing on-line transaction capability in a number of areas; and providing technology tools that assist in streamlining related business processes. This will result in a reduction of workload and ensure that the ministry is able to meet its budget targets. In addition, we will make information available electronically to demonstrate our accountability. We will also use the electronic services to promote citizen engagement and allow opportunities for them to be involved in our planning and decision-making processes.

We will continue the review of legacy systems and where possible work with other ministries to develop replacement options in the most cost effective and efficient manner. The Integrated Systems Initiative (ISI) will continue to be our mechanism for linking all planning activity.

Human Resource Management Plan (HRMP)

During the next three years, the human resource objectives of the ministry will focus primarily on the strategic realignment of the ministry's organizational structure and human resources. Over the next few years, new service delivery models and reductions in the overall ministry budget will result in FTE reductions and devolution of specific services and resources, including staff, to community governance structures. Ministry initiatives will require the HRMP to address workforce adjustment initiatives for current employees who will be subject to layoff and devolution activities. Activities will be related to the establishment of a new ministry organizational structure to support government and ministry priorities. Strategies to support career planning and ongoing employee development will be an essential part of the HRMP. The ministry will support initiatives of the Public Service Employee Relations Commission, including public service renewal and consolidation of human resource services into a more centralized and efficient service delivery model.

New Era Commitments

A number of New Era commitments refer specifically to the Ministry of Children and Family Development:

- Stop the endless bureaucratic restructuring that has drained resources from children and family services. The new governance models to be introduced by the ministry will create more stability in the system and ensure more effective service delivery for children and families
- Focus on early intervention of at-risk children and measures aimed at preventing crisis situations before they arise. As part of a new governance model, the ministry will be working with the community to develop and implement a service delivery structure to support the delivery of early intervention services to children at risk of developing special needs. This would include the implementation of programs that would help develop family capacity to meet the needs of their children.
- Work with foster parents to help them improve care and placements of foster children. The 53-hour BC Foster Care Education Program is currently underway, presented through the community college system. The ministry is reviewing the screening process for foster families and the protocols for abuse/neglect allegations in foster homes. Foster care will be a component of the new governance model to be introduced for child protection and family development.
- With the Ministry of Public Safety and Solicitor General, fight child prostitution and youth crime with specific legislation aimed at providing greater protection to children at risk and greater parental responsibility for children who commit crimes. The ministry will be working with the Ministry of Public Safety and Solicitor General in 2002/03 to consider appropriate measures.
- Increase emphasis on early childhood intervention programs for families with special needs children. The ministry will develop and implement a new service delivery model to support and promote family and community capacity in the delivery of early intervention services to children at risk of developing special needs.

Deregulation and Resulting Service Improvements

The ministry is following government's direction, and has submitted a list of potential changes to its current regulatory environment.
