PREFACE

This Checklist is a continuation of two previously published checklists: Royal Commissions and Commissions of Inquiry under the “Public Inquiries Act” in British Columbia, 1872-1942, by Marjorie Holmes, and Royal Commissions and Commissions of Inquiry under the “Public Inquiries Act” in British Columbia, 1943-1980, by Judith Antonik Bennett. It covers commissions held from 1981 to 2005.

Accompanying evidence, proceedings, and exhibits for these commissions and inquiries are generally held by the British Columbia Archives and are not listed in this volume, unless also held in the Legislative Library collection. Brief descriptions of the British Columbia Archives holdings are included.

Commissions are arranged chronologically by year of appointment, then alphabetically within each year. On a technical note, the Checklist was compiled using software which automatically extracted bibliographical data from the Legislative Library’s library catalogue and automatically generated the index. Consequently the numerical sequence used in the previous two Checklists has not been continued. The numbers preceding each entry apply to commission synopses as well as to individual report titles.

I wish to thank Linda Jackson, who typed part of this manuscript, and John MacEachern, Jane Taylor, and especially Wendy Carmichael, who edited the draft. Thanks also to Melody Wey for scanning and downloading assistance, and the Legislative Library cataloguing staff who assisted in creating the bibliographic records, in particular Horst Huelscher, Barbara Elford and Susan Paterson. I also wish to thank Jane Taylor, Legislative Librarian, and Wendy Carmichael, Manager of Technical Services, who made this publication possible.

This publication is dedicated to my mentor, John MacEachern, former Manager of the Legislative Library’s Government Documents Division.

INTRODUCTION

This Checklist is a continuation of two previously published checklists published by the British Columbia Legislative Library: Royal Commissions and Commissions of Inquiry under the "Public Inquiries Act" in British Columbia, 1872-1942, by Marjorie Holmes, and Royal Commissions and Commissions of Inquiry under the "Public Inquiries Act" in British Columbia, 1943-1980, by Judith Antonik Bennett. Coverage for this compilation is from 1981 to 2005. The arrangement of Checklist entries, primarily by commission date, is further outlined in the Preface. This work consists of material in the Legislative Library’s collection. Some of these publications were not produced for general distribution and are not readily available. Recent material is also available digitally via the Internet.

The title for this compilation varies slightly from the previous two Checklists. In 1979 the former Public Inquiries Act and the Ministerial Inquiries Act were consolidated into the Inquiry Act. Part 1 of the new Act outlines the criteria for ministers initiating inquiries. Part 2 outlines the legalities of conducting inquiries “under the Great Seal”, more commonly known as “royal” commissions. This Checklist includes primarily commissions appointed under Part 1, section 1 and Part 2, section 8 of the Inquiry Act. In this compilation, commissions are assumed to have been appointed under Part 2, unless Part 1 is specified.

The title change for this Checklist also reflects the broader criteria for inclusion of reports than the first two compilations. The purpose of this Checklist is to gather in one reference volume the important inquiries in our province’s history from 1981 to 2005. In reality, important inquiries are not always undertaken using the Inquiry Act. Circumstances occasionally arise where another Act is more suitable to the topic of investigation. This Checklist includes these significant inquiries whose terms of reference meet the requirements of public inquiries. As such, it includes several inquiries initiated by premiers, which are too significant in the history of the Province to be omitted from such a Checklist. These include, for example, the BC Unity Panel, the Citizens’ Assembly on Electoral Reform and two inquiries by the Conflict of Interest Commissioner, one on Premier Vander Zalm and one on Premier Glen Clark. The Forest Resources Commission is also included. Although a departmental initiative under the Ministry of Forests, lasting for only three years, the Forest Resources Commission had the importance and scope of other major royal commissions on forestry.

Occasionally commissions are set-up and are disbanded prior to completing their work. These commissions are also included in this compilation. One example is the Commission of Inquiry into the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society and Uses of Gaming Proceeds (also referred to as the Smith Inquiry) undertaken in 1996 and terminated in 2001. Also included is the Carrier Lumber Inquiry, which was contemplated, but due to ongoing litigation, was never formalized.

The latest commission in this compilation appointed under the Inquiry Act was in 2000. This was Judith Korbin’s Commission on the Contractual Relationships Between the Government and Doctors in the Province of British Columbia. The Citizens’ Assembly on Electoral Reform was established in 2003 and completed in December 2004. The B.C. Children and Youth Review, established in November 2005, has also been included. Although reporting to the Minister for Children and Family Development and not struck under the Inquiry Act, it followed up on the work of the 1994 Gove Commission, and thus, was too significant to be omitted. The Electoral Boundaries Commission brings this compilation up to the end of 2005. The Electoral Boundaries Commission was established in October 2005, and formalized by Order in Council December 13, 2005. On March 13, 2008 the Legislative Assembly unanimously passed a motion to adopt the Commission’s final report, with amendments. However this Checklist was published prior to the final adoption of enabling legislation, brought before the House in the 2008 Spring session. As such this Checklist does not list Commission reports and related reports of interest published after April 2008. For further information on the outcome of the Electoral Boundaries Commission please consult the Legislative Library’s catalogue.

Background papers, research reports, newsletters and related materials published by the commissions are listed. Although not publications of the commission, related government reports are included to provide context for the inquiries and to assist researchers and students locate relevant material. These include important submissions by British Columbia Government ministries and crown agencies and selective British Columbia Government and judicial reports in response to commission issues and findings. Non-governmental reports of relevance to the commissions are omitted from this work.

"Royal Commissions are well established in British parliamentary law. The first use of a royal commission to "inquire about problems of societal importance" may date back 900 years to the 11th century. The unique ability of a royal commission to "provide a substantial review" of "quasi-judicial" bodies ... independent of Government or political agendas, explains, in part, their long history. (Royal Commission on Workers' Compensation in British Columbia, 1996. Background information). In Canada royal commissions date from before confederation, and commence in British Columbia in 1872, the year after the Province joined confederation.

In British Columbia a royal commission is created by Cabinet on behalf of the Lieutenant Governor in Council and empowered by an Order in Council issued under the Inquiry Act. Terms of reference, reporting dates, and expenses are outlined in the Order in Council. This ensures that the commission mandate is clear and the boundaries of investigation are set, as mandates, time-lines and costs can be difficult to control once the commission is underway.

Royal commissions are usually chaired by one or more highly respected persons, and, because of their quasi-judicial powers, the commissioners are often retired judges. There are two types of royal commissions. They are either policy commissions struck to investigate matters of great societal importance or they are investigative commissions, often involving controversy. The former are mandated to develop policy options with public input. The latter are judicial inquiries set up to investigate individual or institutional misconduct. Although set up and reporting to government, royal commissions are legally autonomous from government and are given their own budget independent of government. They may be granted enormous investigatory powers, including summoning witnesses under oath, offering of indemnities, seizing documents and other evidence (sometimes including those normally protected, such as classified information), holding hearings in camera if necessary, and compelling reluctant government officials to aid in the execution of the commission.

Commissions usually hold province-wide hearings, receive many submissions, undertake their own research, and interview numerous witnesses and experts. For sweeping commissions, such as those on health, forestry and education issues, the process may take several years and continue through changes in government. The results are published in often large reports, detailing their findings and recommending legislative and policy changes. In British Columbia, reports are usually officially made public by tabling them in the Legislative Assembly. Under the Inquiry Act, s. 14.2: "A report made to the Lieutenant Governor in Council under this Part must be laid before the Legislative Assembly within 15 days after the report is made, if the Legislative Assembly is then sitting, or if not, then within 15 days after the opening of the next session of the Occasionally this formality has "slipped through the cracks". Occasionally, too, reports have inadvertently been tabled twice. Commission reports are frequently referred to by the principle commissioner's name, such as the Gove report, the Oppal report, etc. This is due, in part, to the Commissioner's name becoming well-known during the course of the public inquiry. It is also due to the long official titles of some reports. While commission reports are often quite influential, with the government acting on some or all recommendations, governments are under no obligation to implement the recommendations. The work of some commissions may be almost completely ignored. In recent years, governments have been reluctant to initiate investigations under the Inquiry Act due to the enormous administrative and legal costs which can escalate unpredictably as the inquiry unfolds.

For further definitions of terms and for historical background on the formation and use of royal commissions of inquiry please refer to the introduction in: Royal Commissions and Commissions of Inquiry under the "Public Inquiries Act" in British Columbia, 1872-1942, by Marjorie Holmes. Also very useful is: "The inquiry process : uranium mining in British Columbia, by Tim Roberts, published by the Legal Services Society of British Columbia, Schools Program, in 1982.

On June 21, 2007 the British Columbia Government passed a new Public Inquiry Act (S.B.C. 2007, c. 9), with revised parameters for conducting royal commissions in British Columbia. The next checklist of royal commissions will cover commissions appointed under this new Act.

George MacMinn, Clerk of the House, was requested to "define the historical and statutory authority of the Speaker as the administrator of the affairs of the Legislative Assembly with a view to defining areas where changes may be required...". (p. 1). Draft legislation was submitted to create a Board of Internal Economy to manage the administration of the Legislative Assembly. The Board of Internal Economy became operational in June 1987 with the passage of the Legislative Assembly Board of Internal Economy Act (S.B.C. 1987, c. 75). In July 1992 this Act was repealed and replaced by the Legislative Assembly Management Committee Act (S.B.C. 1992, c. 26; R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 257).

The Commissioner, Derril T. Warren, was appointed to inquire into the need, if any, for amendment to the Constitution Act to ensure fair representation in the Legislative Assembly for all the people of British Columbia. Warren, a lawyer, was the leader of the British Columbia Progressive Conservative Party from 1971 to 1973. The application of a mathematical formula based on population and geography resulted in the recommendation that seven new seats be added to the Legislative Assembly. This increased representation should be viewed as interim only, pending the creation of a permanent Electoral Commission which would deal "with the ever-changing needs for equitable and effective representation of the people of British Columbia." (p. 42). The Constitution Amendment Act (S.B.C. 1984, c. 12) established the permanent 3-person British Columbia Electoral Commission, which published its first report in September 1984. Rather than the seven new seats that Warren had initially recommended in his report, the Electoral Commission proposed twelve new seats. The Legislature accepted this latter proposal. The Constitution Amendment Act (S.B.C. 1985, c. 3) increased the number of members from 52 to 69 and altered the boundaries for Surrey.

The Act established a permanent three-person commission to review electoral districts of the Province. Commissioners must include the current Chief Electoral Officer, the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly and a Provincial Court Judge to be appointed by the Chief Judge of the Provincial Court. Canada population figures to determine which electoral districts exceeded the electoral district base by more than 50%. The electoral districts identified as being under-represented were to have their number of members increased by one additional member. The report recommended that eleven electoral districts be represented by two members, instead of the current one member and that Surrey be divided into three electoral districts, each represented by one member. The Constitution Amendment Act (S.B.C. 1985, c. 3) increased the Legislative Assembly from 57 members to 69 members. This Act also divided Surrey into three electoral districts: Surrey-Guildford-Whalley, Surrey-Newton and Surrey-White Rock-Cloverdale.

Kenneth Norman Warwick, otherwise known as Norman Fox, as a previously convicted rapist, was wrongfully imprisoned for eight years for a rape he did not commit. The Commissioner recommended a lump sum compensation payment. The sum of $275,000 was agreed to, a portion of which would be given to a previous rape victim of Mr. Fox. Disagreements arose over how much the share should be. The Attorney General, Brian Smith, appointed retired Appeal Court Judge Meredith McFarlane to mediate the dispute. McFarlane recommended the rape victim receive $35,000. The Attorney General rejected this recommendation, saying the victim's share was too low, and set Mr. Fox's share at $175,000 and the victim's share at $100,000. Fox "said it was inconceivable that the attorney general would completely ignore the recommendations of the commissioner but he would not pursue the matter." (Times Colonist, January 10, 1986, p. A1: Third of Fox payout going to victim, by Les Leyne).

The Commission was established March 27, 1986 under the Inquiry Act, Part 2, to inquire into the effectiveness of the delivery of social housing in British Columbia. The Commission Chairman, James Cosh, was a chartered accountant and managing partner of the Vancouver office of Thorne Riddell; the Vice-Chairman, Shelley Tratch, was a barrister and solicitor with the Vancouver law firm of Ladner Downs; and James Cutt was a professor of public administration at the University of Victoria. The background "situation facing the Commission on its appointment were these: a number of studies of social housing and related subjects had been completed in the past few years. Some of these studies were designed and carried out by those who delivered the services being evaluated. Some have been criticized for a lack of objectivity or other reasons; and concerns had been expressed by individuals and groups by letter and in the media about the efficiency and effectiveness of current social and cooperative housing programs. These included allegations concerning the inappropriate use of public funds." (Preliminary report, p. 5). The objectives of the inquiry were: "to identify the nature of and need for social housing; to describe and assess the current delivery system; to estimate the extent of unmet needs for social housing; [and] to generate a set of policy options whereby social housing could be provided more cost-effectively to those most in need of it." (Preliminary report, p. 6). The Commission's major recommendation was to create and maintain a system for the coordinated management of planning, policy and social housing delivery. This recommendation, as well as the recommendation that all funds for housing service be administered within one budget, were addressed by the Government with the establishment of the Ministry of Social Services and Housing in August 1986. The Government also established a Cabinet Committee on Social Policy to facilitate consultation and to ensure public accountability. A review of legislation regulating housing co-operatives, landlord/tenant relations and municipal housing construction was suggested. The establishment of a province-wide social needs registry and a social housing advisory council were also called for by the Commission.

The objective of the Commission was "to inquire into the effectiveness of the delivery of social housing in British Columbia in serving those most in need of assistance in obtaining affordable housing." (p. 1). In their preliminary report, the Commissioners recommended the implementation of a management system to rigorously define social housing need, to establish a social housing advisory committee to objectively allocate available social housing resources, and to periodically evaluate social housing delivery and policy compliance. They also recommended better coordination of planning and delivery of social housing between federal, provincial, regional and municipal levels of government.

Commissioners: Malcolm A. Matheson, Mary E. Saunders, J. David N. Edgar.

Jacobsen suffered a fractured kneecap resulting in permanent disability in 1983 while incarcerated for intoxication in the Vancouver City Police Jail. The Commissioners, members of the British Columbia Police Commission, concluded that Mr. Jacobsen was assaulted by one or more officers on duty at the time. "Subsequently, there was collusion, suppression of evidence and lies on the part of those involved to avoid the truth of the incident." (p. ii). It was recommended that the matter be referred again to Crown Counsel; that disciplinary authority under the Police Act review the conduct of the officers involved; that video monitoring and recording equipment be installed to cover jail bookings; that the viability of discontinuing operation of a jail by the Vancouver Police Department be studied; and that a program be developed for the enhancement and maintenance of police ethics. Jacobsen was awarded $75,000 plus court costs. Police Corporal Brian Nixon, the duty officer in charge of the jail the night of the beating, was subsequently charged with aggravated assault and sentenced in November 1989 by Madame Justice Patricia Proudfoot of the British Columbia Supreme Court, to nine months in jail. In March 1992 Jacobsen was found dead, apparently of natural causes. (Vancouver Sun, March 14, 1992, p. E14; Police beating victim, 32, dies, by Gerry Bellett).

1987. BRITISH COLUMBIA. COMMISSIONER INQUIRY INTO THE COQUIHALLA AND RELATED HIGHWAY PROJECTS. REPORT

To ensure completion of the Coquihalla Highway in time for Expo 86, construction was fast-tracked over difficult terrain and during adverse weather conditions. The government insisted the project was completed within its budget, but this increasingly seemed not to be the case. Douglas MacKay, a professional engineer, was appointed "to compare the estimates and costs of the Coquihalla Highway; to find reasons and justification for differences between estimates and costs; to examine other recent highway projects where costs may have differed from estimates; to investigate the procedures for costing, administering, and reporting highway projects; [and] to make recommendations." (p. vii). The reporting date was twice extended by Order in Council amendments.

The Commissioner concluded that the Legislature and the public were deliberately misled about the cost of the Coquihalla Highway Project. The true costs were disguised by falsifying documents and expense account transfers. "These manipulations were directed as well as authorized by those in political authority." (p. xii). The Ministry of Transportation and Highways failed to provide adequate budgeting, cost-control monitoring and reporting systems. The Commissioner could "find no justification for such failures" and observed "that in the matter of the Coquihalla Highway, the legislature lost effective control of the public purse." (p. xiv). Changes in standards and procedures for estimating, budgeting, cost control, project management, contract administration, management organization and contract documentation were recommended. Attributing direct blame for wrong doing and recommending political accountability and retribution were beyond the scope of the Commissioner's inquiry.

The Royal Commission was instructed to "inquire into and ... report on education in the Province from kindergarten through grade 12". (Order in Council no. 446, 1987). With this mandate the Commissioner, Vancouver lawyer Barry M. Sullivan, reported on the current state of British Columbia's public and independent schools, identified areas of present concern and assessed the programs and administrative processes required to ensure that the population of British Columbia would be "well prepared to meet the rapidly changing challenges of everyday life in the 21st century". (Order in Council no. 446, 1987). The recommendations, which were comprehensive, far-reaching and, at times, controversial, guided educational reform in the succeeding years. The Government committed to development of a new provincial curriculum structure to be phased in over the next ten years. The new curriculum would place greater emphasis on problem solving and creative thinking, as well as basic literacy skills. A Provincial Education Policy Advisory Committee was created to advise the Government on the implementation of the Royal Commission report. A new School Act (S.B.C. 1989, c. 61) was enacted July 17, 1989 and an Education Advisory Council, with broad community representation, was established to provide ongoing advice to Government.

Acting on a initiative announced in the 1987 Throne Speech, the Government asked Judge Fisher to determine how the boundaries for the current 17 dual-member ridings could be redrawn to become single-member constituencies. After several months of investigation and public hearings Fisher requested that the scope of the Commission be broadened to include examination of all 52 ridings, rather than just the 17 dual-member ridings. A new Order in Council authorized expansion of the Commission's original mandate.

Judge Fisher proposed 75 legislative districts and the elimination of dual-member ridings. To ensure quality of representation he recommended adoption of a province-wide standard for the population of electoral districts. The boundaries of most existing constituencies were redrawn such that no constituency population varied by more than plus or minus 25% from the provincial average of 38,523 based on the 1986 census. On June 22, 1988 the Legislative Assembly appointed a Special Committee on Electoral Boundaries "to examine, inquire into and make recommendations to the House, unanimously, respecting the Preliminary Report of the British Columbia Royal Commission on Electoral Boundaries: May 1988, so as to assist the Commissioner of Electoral Boundaries in making his Final Report." (British Columbia. Legislative Assembly. Journals. 1988. p. 96). The Committee's report was presented to the House March 29, 1989 and adopted. The Committee reported on its series of public hearings and its investigative approach as one parallel to the Royal Commission's, so as not to impinge on any aspect of the Commission. As the Legislative Assembly did not sit from June 29, 1988 to March 16, 1989 the Committee was not able to make recommendations prior to the preparation of Judge Fisher's final report.

Judge Fisher reaffirmed the reasoning and two basic recommendations of his Preliminary report: "the size of the Legislature should be increased to 75 members; the extent to which electoral district populations can be permitted to deviate from a common provincial electoral quota is plus or minus 25%". (p. 4). Minor boundary adjustments and changes in the names of proposed electoral districts were also recommended.

On March 29, 1989 the House authorized the Select Standing Committee on Labour, Justice and Intergovernmental Relations to examine, inquire into and make recommendations, unanimously, with respect to Judge Fisher's final report. In its First report, dated July 14, 1989, the Committee recommended that the size of the Legislature be increased to 75 members and that dual-member ridings be abolished. It also recommended the establishment of an independent non-partisan Electoral Boundaries Commission to regularly review electoral boundaries and suggested guidelines for the Commission's mandate. Order in Council 1071/89, dated July 10, 1989, authorized Judge Fisher to receive and consider questions arising out of his report. Order in Council no. 156, January 24, 1990, officially accepted Fisher's reforms, to take effect on the date the Parliament dissolved and the Government called the next election. The Committee's second report was presented to the Legislative Assembly on April 24, 1990 as the Third Report of the Select Standing Committee. The new electoral boundaries map drawn by Judge Fisher was accepted and names for the new constituencies established by the Committee were adopted. The new Election District Act (S.B.C. 1990, c. 39) received royal assent July 27, 1990. The recommendations were brought into force on September 19, 1991 with the dissolution of the 34th Legislative Assembly. ISBN: 0771887205

1988. BRITISH COLUMBIA. ROYAL COMMISSION ON THE ESCAPE FROM L.M.R.C.C. REPORT

Commissioner: Ian L. Drost.
"September 29, 1988"

On January 1, 1988 thirteen prisoners escaped from the normally unused old segregation unit of the Lower Mainland Regional Correctional Centre (Oakalla). The Commissioner, Judge Ian Drost, was asked to examine the causes of the incident including the events leading up to it; the inmates' preparation for the escape; the physical security of the Correctional Centre; and the adequacy of staffing and policies to ensure that measures would be taken to prevent recurrence of such an incident. The Commissioner attributed the escapes to human error and was critical of Oakalla management and staff decisions and actions. Drost recommended the earliest possible closure of Oakalla; the closure of the old segregation unit; improved training for staff; maintaining additional security staff; improved programming for inmates; developing a specially selected and trained tactical team unit; and numerous policy changes. The Solicitor General immediately acted on or committed himself to implementation of every recommendation, including the earliest possible closure of Oakalla. Oakalla was formally closed July 13, 1991. The 77-year-old facility was replaced by two pre-trial centres, in addition to the Burnaby Women's Correctional Centre and the Fraser Regional Correctional Centre at Maple Ridge.

The newly-built Save-on-Foods Store at Station Square in the Burnaby Metrotown development collapsed on opening day, April 23, 1988. Dan Closkey, former Surrey municipal manager experienced in the field of municipal building regulation, was appointed to report on the circumstances surrounding the collapse and to recommend measures to prevent similar occurrences in the future. Evidence showed that a major roof beam was greatly under-designed and lacked essential lateral supports, due to miscalculation by structural engineers. The Commissioner found "a definite lapse of communication and instruction between the various parties involved in the building process." (p. iii). He recommended that municipalities assume the responsibility of auditing structural engineering drawings and calculations for major buildings and that the province develop a manual of recommended construction practices and procedures to clarify

The Forest Resources Commission was created on June 29, 1989, as a permanent, independent commission to advise the Minister of Forests on matters relating to his duties, powers and functions. The Commission was given a mandate "to provide the Minister of Forests and through him, the Government, with a comprehensive view of what the forests of British Columbia should represent." In examining this subject, the Commission was directed to "take into account the full range of forest values: how the forest might be managed to protect and enhance those values and the total economic impact of the forests to the Province." The Commission undertook public hearings and published numerous special studies and investigations. "It soon became apparent to all Commissioners that the way the Government and industry were currently managing the forests was significantly out of step with what the public expected and, indeed, was demanding. The historical practices of managing the forests primarily for their timber values must give way to managing the forests, in an integrated way, for all values. The Commission recommended that Government move to adopt a series of policies that would ensure the intensive, integrated management for all forest values on the largest forest land base possible. This concept was called Enhanced Stewardship." (Concluding comments, July 1992, p. 1-2). The Commission's major report, The Future of Our Forests, was released in April 1991. "The report provided a vision statement of what British Columbians want from their forests, advice on the need for land use planning, improved management and financial structures, tenure reform, the need for improved inventories, the need for improved forest practices, the need for better education about our forests and forest practices at all levels, and the need for more meaningful public participation in forest planning and management". (Concluding comments, July 1992, p. 2). In July 1992 the Commission outlined the framework for a Forest Practices Code, including the legislative and administrative processes needed to implement the code. In July 1992 the Forest Resources Commission was disbanded. Throughout 1993 and 1994 the Government undertook a public process to implement the Forest Practices Code, which came into effect in 1995. Commissioner: Peter Bazowski.

Order in Council no. 1006, July 7, 1989 stated: "may appoint Peter Bazowski or Donald D. Cliffe".

1989. BRITISH COLUMBIA. LIQUOR LICENSING REVIEW. REPORT

The Minister of Labour and Consumer Services appointed Peter Bazowski "to inquire into and report ... re matters of granting and rejecting of licencees, permits or approvals under the Liquor Control and Licensing Act or regulations under that Act." (Order in Council no. 1006, 1989).

Bazowski was the former deputy minister responsible for the Liquor Control and Licensing Branch and a former Ombudsman. The review was prompted by public concern over perceived political interference in granting of marine and pub licences, notably the licensing of the Knight Street Pub. The General Manager of the Liquor Control and Licensing Branch had sole discretionary powers to grant liquor licenses. The Commissioner recommended that this concentration of decision making power with one individual should be changed to a committee system, composed of the General Manager and other senior officials of the Ministry. A comprehensive written policy manual was also recommended. On November 17, 1989 Labour and Consumer Minister Norman Jacobsen announced the implementation of a new liquor appeal board and a new liquor licensing committee designed to improve the provincial liquor licensing process.

Tabled: June 18, 1990.

Peter Lusztig, Dean of the Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration at the University of British Columbia, was appointed to prepare a detailed financial analysis of the British Columbia tree fruit industry, including production, packing, processing and marketing. The "constraints and opportunities affecting both the short term and long term viability" of the industry, "actions and policy options necessary to improve industry self-reliance" and "strategies for the growth and development of the industry" were to be examined. (Order in Council). The Commissioner recommended that government subsidies in the fruit industry be phased out, that unmarketable varieties be replanted and the packaging and marketing be decentralized. The Government created the Okanagan Valley Tree Fruit Authority to oversee this restructuring and revitalization of the province's tree fruit industry. The Authority was established July 26, 1990 with the passage of the Okanagan Valley Tree Fruit Authority Act (R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 339). It continued until March 31, 2003 when the responsibility for the Orchard Replant Program was transferred by a trust agreement to the Investment Agriculture Foundation of British Columbia, as of April 1, 2003.

MacKay, formerly the Greater Vancouver Water District Commissioner and Chief Engineer, was retained to examine and make recommendations on the Vancouver Island Natural Gas Pipeline's route options through and around the Coquitlam watershed, as well as to address public concern over potential impacts on public health, water quality and the environment. Six possible pipeline routes were analyzed for length, pipeline construction feasibility, environmental impacts and cost. The Coquitlam Watershed route was recommended, with the proviso that stringent water quality protection and construction standards and procedures were implemented to prevent contamination of the water supply during construction, operation and maintenance of the pipeline by Pacific Coast Energy Corporation. The priority of the watershed was to be the long-term production of ample clean water and proposals for other activities in the watershed should be evaluated against this priority.

At head of title: In the Province of British Columbia.
"May 29, 1990"
Commissioners: J. David N. Edgar, Mary E. Saunders, Audrey L. Moore.
Tabled: June 14, 1990.

On recommendations of the Ombudsman, in his report: "Police complaint process, the Fullerton complaint," the British Columbia Police Commission (chair, David Edgar, and Police Commission members Mary Saunders and Audrey Moore, were appointed "to enquire into and report on all matters associated with alleged improper treatment of Robert or Francine Fullerton by members of the Matsqui police force on or about July 15, 1985 ...; and upon the internal police inquiry, investigations and hearings following complaint by Robert and Francine Fullerton". (Order in Council no. 118, 1989). After the Commission was established, the Fullertons' civil action claiming damages for assault by members of the Matsqui Police Department came to trial and a jury verdict dismissed the action on May 4, 1989. The Commissioners accepted the jury's findings that the alleged assault did not occur. They concluded that as the trial had fully and justly determined and evaluated the facts and evidence, that no further consideration of the complaints and allegations was warranted. Since the jury trial fulfilled part of the Commission's mandate, the Commission focused on "the process used by the Matsqui Police Department in exploring and investigating the Fullertons' allegations of criminal assault at the gravel pit and their broader citizen's complaints against the Department for alleged rough treatment at the jail, improper medical treatment and lack of a breathalyzer test. The Commission criticized Matsqui Deputy Chief Constable Vander Hoek's handling of the complaints and suggested that his actions be reviewed by the appropriate disciplinary authority within the Matsqui Police Department. The Commission recommended against financial compensation for the time, effort and expense of the Fullertons in pursuit of their complaints. Their complaints were not substantiated and compensation would set a precedent of compensation for future complaints against municipal police departments.

Commissioner Stephen Owen, Provincial Ombudsman, conducted an in-depth investigation into "the process and procedure followed by the Ministry of Attorney General in deciding that William E. [Bill] Reid [Minister of Tourism and Provincial Secretary] would not be prosecuted with respect to the awarding of a grant under the Growth and Opportunities B.C. Grant Program to the Semiahmoo House Society." (Order in Council no. 621, 1990). Owen determined that everyone in the Ministry of Attorney General, as well as the police and the private lawyers hired by the Ministry to review the Reid case, acted with integrity, independence and professionalism. Owen confirmed that the decision not to prosecute Mr. Reid was made by former Deputy Attorney General Ted Hughes without any political or improper influence. Allegations of interference in the process of justice were unfounded. To ensure the separation of politics from the administration of justice in future, the Government introduced a special prosecutor system for deciding whether or not to lay charges against politicians or senior officials. To increase public confidence in the integrity of the criminal justice system with regard to prosecution of politicians, clear procedures with mandatory public disclosure were implemented.

1990. BRITISH COLUMBIA ROYAL COMMISSION ON HEALTH CARE AND COSTS. REPORTS

Commission Chair: Peter D. Seaton.

The Commissioners appointed to this inquiry were: the Honourable Mr. Justice Peter Seaton (Chairman), former Vancouver alderman Marguerite Ford, University of British Columbia health economics professor Dr. Robert G. Evans, Greater Victoria Hospital Society President Ken Fykes, and management consultant David Sinclair. In November 1990 Dr. William A. Webber, long-time Dean of Medicine at the University of British Columbia, was also appointed to the Commission. The Commission received a broad mandate to examine the structure, management and funding of British Columbia's health care services, and to identify possible options to improve both the cost-effectiveness and quality of care. Requirements for professional personnel, the use of advanced technology, the promotion of good health, and the use of prescription drugs were also investigated. The Commission's comprehensive report contained over 350 recommendations. Expanded community-based care and a greater emphasis on preventative care, home care and extended care were recommended. The Government established an Advisory Committee and a Royal Commission Response Office to assist in the development of a strategic plan and a detailed response to the Royal Commission's recommendations.

The Commissioner David Anderson, former MP and MLA, and oil-spill advisor, reviewed "all matters concerning exploration for and development of petroleum, natural gas or natural gas storage in the Fraser Valley, and the areas, if any, that should be excluded from petroleum or natural gas exploration, development or storage ..." (Order in Council). The public's concern over impacts on human health, private property, and air and water quality were investigated. Anderson concluded the risks of exploratory drilling were slight and the gains could be great. More geological information on the Fraser Valley was necessary before an evaluation could be made regarding underground storage.

Report by Job Protection Commission.

In March 1991 Commissioners George Watts and Garth Langford of the British Columbia Job Protection Commission were appointed under Section 8 of the Inquiry Act to inquire into and report "on the interests in the Hazelton-Kitwanga area of Westar Timber Ltd." and to "make recommendations to the Minister of Forests concerning possible options for the sale of Westar's assets and the transfer of associated tenures". (Order in Council). "Their recommendations formed a set of general guidelines for considering the proposal of Repap Carnaby for acquiring Westar's assets and tenures." (Ramsey report to the Honourable Dan Miller, Minister of Forests,

Paul Ramsey, Ministry of Forests Parliamentary Secretary and Member of the Legislative Assembly for Prince George North, was appointed "to gather and assess public reaction to the proposed transfer of forest licence #A16831 from Westar Timber Ltd. (now known as Westshore Terminals Ltd.) to Repap Carnaby Inc." (Report, p. [1]). Repap also had an agreement in principle with Ammalghun Forest Products which provided for the purchase of 15% of Repap Carnaby. Through public hearings and submissions Ramsey discovered that the local community was strongly opposed to the transfer. He recommended that the licence transfer be denied unless Repap Carnaby Ltd.
submitted a revised proposal that met the approval of the Kitwanga Hazelton community. On July 16, 1992 Forests Minister Dan Miller conditionally approved the licence transfer. The approval included the sale of the Carnaby sawmill complex and a whole-log chipper at New Hazelton, reserved a 15 percent buy-in for aboriginal interests, and required Repap to provide the Minister with a comprehensive plan for aboriginal consultation and employment.

Review requested by the Premier. Cf.[p. 1]
Not tabled.

Premier William N. Vander Zalm appointed E.N. (Ted) Hughes "to conduct a review for the purpose of determining whether he was in a conflict of interest situation "past, present or future" with respect to his role, if any, in the sale of Fantasy Gardens." (p. [1]). Hughes, as Acting Conflict of Interest Commissioner, undertook this assignment without statute authority as the Members' Conflict of Interest Act (R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 286) was proclaimed in December 1990, after the sale of Fantasy Gardens had occurred. On April 2, 1991 Hughes concluded as follows: "1. The Premier played the primary and dominant role in the 1990 sale of Fantasy Gardens; 2. By the Premier's participation in the events that led to the sale of Fantasy Gardens and the sale itself, the Premier was in breach of his Conflict of Interest Guidelines." (p. 61). Upon release of the Hughes report the Premier resigned. After further investigation by Special Prosecutor Peter C. M. Freeman, the Attorney-General charged Vander Zalm on September 12, 1991 with breach of trust for accepting $20,000 U.S. from Tan Yu, of AsiaWorld Development Corporation, contrary to Section 122 of the Criminal Code of Canada. In June 1992 Vander Zalm was acquitted of criminal charges.

The Commission was established to review the principles used in determining compensation when mining or logging rights are reduced or cancelled by the Provincial government. The Commissioner, Richard Schwindt, held joint appointments in the Department of Economics and the Faculty of Business Administration at Simon Fraser University and was a specialist in the industrial economics of resource industries. The issues considered were: when was compensation warranted? How should compensation be calculated? How should disputes be resolved? The Commission concluded that "owners of mineral and timber interests should be compensated when these interests are taken for a public purpose." (p. [147]). Also, "no useful purpose would be served by legislating a comprehensive definition of "taking" .... Therefore the issue should be dealt with on a case by case basis by legislators, or in the final instance, by courts. General principles are suggested to guide legislators and policy makers in determining whether an interference amounts to a compensable taking." (p. [147]).

The Commissioner recommended that long-term contract workers for the British Columbia Government be reclassified as full-time employees and be required to join the B.C. Government Employees' Union. She also recommended the establishment of a single agency responsible for human resources and labour management issues in the health care sector. The Government responded by appointing a special 13-member committee to develop the model for a new organization to represent all health care employers. The new management organization would be responsible for coordinating all human resource issues, such as collective bargaining, training and staffing. The Commission was mandated to review recruiting, hiring and promotion policies, contracting out, to define collective bargaining structures, to standardize employee benefits and to advise on cost efficient and effective personnel policies. The report resulted in a new Public Service Act (S.B.C. 1993, c. 66 ; R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 385). A Public Service Employee Relations Commission was established to direct and coordinate human resource matters throughout the public service, replacing the existing Government Personnel Services Division. A new Public Service Appeal Board replaced the Public Service Commission.

Submitted to the Speaker.
Appendix A: Profile of the job of a Member of the Legislative Assembly, was considered the Preliminary report (according to the press).
Includes bibliographical references: Appendix H.

C. J. (Chuck) Connaghan, an industrial relations consultant and former chairman of the Round Table on the Environment and the Economy, was appointed on June 23, 1992, by a unanimous resolution of the British Columbia Legislative Assembly to conduct an independent review of what Members of the Legislative Assembly should be paid and how future pay raises should be set. Terms of Reference included an assessment and recommendations on present salary levels; the utilization of a formula to adjust remuneration levels from time to time; and the appointment of an independent body to recommend or set those levels from time to time. The public was asked for written submissions "to address such questions as: What is the primary job of an MLA? In terms of pay and benefits, what other jobs in our society would rank with the job of an MLA? Should the Legislative Assembly or an independent commission decide how much to pay an MLA? Should a formula, perhaps related to the Consumer Price Index, be used to determine future increases?".
(Times Colonist, September 1, 1992, p. A2: "How should pay levels be set for MLAs?", advertisement by Commission). Salaries were previously set by the MLAs through a Board of Internal Economy. On June 23, 1992 the Legislative Assembly Management Committee Act was introduced to repeal the Legislative Assembly Board of Internal Economy Act. The new Committee would not set MLA pay. The new Act received royal assent on July 3, 1992. Connaghan's report, released on December 15, 1992, noted that being a Member of the Legislative Assembly had become a full-time job and Members were entitled to fair and adequate compensation for their public service, including an expense allowance, pension plan and benefits package. However this compensation should follow, and not lead, the private sector. A formula was suggested for determining salary increases and Connaghan recommended that remuneration should be reviewed every three years by a Commissioner on MLA Remuneration. Running parallel to this inquiry was a Constituency Allowance Review, by E. N. (Ted) Hughes, the Conflict of Interest Commissioner. This Constituency Allowance Review was partially prompted by issues arising from the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holdings Society management of Members' constituency allowances.

Commissioner: Dorothy Caddell.

Commissioner Dorothy Caddell was appointed to inquire into toxic waste reduction and hazardous waste management. As part of its commitment to public consultation, the Waste Reduction Commission held open houses, roundtable discussions, think tank sessions and stakeholder meetings throughout the province to obtain feedback on various product stewardship strategies. The Commission contacted over 7,000 individuals, companies, agencies and organizations, and received 75 written submissions. In her final report Caddell concluded that British Columbians were ready to accept responsibility for the consumption of household hazardous wastes. Her proposal emphasized reduction, reuse, and reformulation before recovery and disposal. She outlined a framework for the development of economic opportunities through the emergence of new home-grown industries and products for "green" technology.

The Waste Reduction Commission released this Ministry of Environment, Lands and Parks' discussion paper in April of 1993. This discussion paper focused consultation on options the Government was considering for the reduction and management of household hazardous waste. The options outlined in the discussion paper were on three systems of product stewardship - deposit, green tax and industry funded and operated (IFO). All three systems addressed the question "Who is going to pay for the collection and disposal of household hazardous waste and how should the system be managed?" (Greener homes, cleaner communities, Transmittal letter).

1992. CARIBOO-CHILcotIN justICE INQUIRY (B.C.). REPORTS

Judge Sarich was asked to investigate the relationship between the Cariboo-Chilcotin First Nations peoples and the justice community. The First Nations peoples had alleged that they were subject to prejudice and unfair treatment. "The purpose of this Inquiry [was] not to initiate disciplinary action against any individual or group. Rather, the Commissioner [was to] ascertain the factors which gave rise to such allegations of unfair treatment, prejudice, or the use of unnecessary or excessive force, determine the extent to which such problems [existed] in the administration of justice in the Cariboo-Chilcotin Region, and make recommendations for their rectification." (Order in Council no. 1508/92, Schedule: Terms of Reference). The entire justice system, including police, crown prosecutors, courts, probation officers and family court counsellors, was to be scrutinized. The Commission concluded that the "Native people have not been well served by the process of justice of non-native society." (p. 18). He recommended ways to address the inequalities, to improve police-community relations, and to respond to specific cultural needs of aboriginal people within the justice system. On behalf of the Province, the Attorney General officially apologized to the Chilcotin people for the Chilcotin War and the hanging of the Chilcotin Chiefs in 1864. The Attorney General also asked Marion Buller to carry out a province-wide consultation on aboriginal legal services to address the specific legal service issues and requirements of the province's aboriginal peoples. Her report "A review of legal services to aboriginal peoples in British Columbia", was published in 1994.

1992. INQUIRY INTO SAFETY OF LOADING PROCEDURES USED BY BRITISH COLUMBIA FERRIES. REPORT

182 Inquiry Into Safety of Loading Procedures Used By British Columbia Ferries.
In the matter of an inquiry pursuant to Section 1 of the Inquiry Act into safety of loading procedures used by British Columbia Ferries / Commissioner Nathan T. Nemetz. -- [Victoria, B.C. : Ministry of Finance and Corporate Relations], 1992. 71 p. ; 28 cm.

Former Chief Justice of British Columbia Nathan Nemetz was requested by the Board of Directors of BC Ferries on August 14, 1992 to undertake an independent review of the Corporation's safety procedures with regard to docking and loading. The Inquiry was in response to a serious accident on August 13, 1992 while the M.V. Queen of New Westminster was loading at the Departure Bay (Nanaimo) Terminal. A van carrying the Askew family was on the loading ramp when the vessel moved forward, collapsing the ramp and plunging the van into the ocean below. "Tragically, Mrs. Askew and one daughter died. Mr. Askew was seriously injured, and his remaining daughter is still in hospital." (p. 2). Several other incidents were investigated. One accident on August 10, 1992 at the Denman Island ferry terminal occurred when the loading ramp gave way, sinking a logging truck as it boarded the M.V. Quintetsa. The driver and his dog escaped without injuries. Another incident occurred on August 14, 1992 at the Westview terminal when the M.V. Queen of Sidney prematurely departed, before the "all-clear" procedures had been completed. On August 18, 1992, Finance Minister Glen Clark announced that Nemetz had been granted full powers under Part 1 of the Inquiry Act to conduct an independent review and summon witnesses, as necessary. The Commissioner's report made fourteen recommendations to improve safety, which BC Ferries implemented.

189 Policing in British Columbia Commission of Inquiry.

Commissioner: Wallace T. Oppal.
Tabled: March 27, 1995.

The creation of this police inquiry was prompted by public concern over three separate police shootings of suspects while conducting search warrants. The public was concerned about the use of force by police, the issue of police investigating themselves when there was a complaint about police conduct, and police actions when exercising a search warrant. The Commissioner's terms of reference were to report on the roles of the Attorney General, British Columbia Police Commission and police boards, as well as the use of force, police training, reporting and accountability. Judge Oppal was also asked to look at the broader aspects of policing. This included the selection and training of municipal police officers, regionalization and coordination of police services, community-based policing, aboriginal policing, private security and review of the Police Act and Regulations. Oppal's comprehensive report contained 317 recommendations, including 89 legislative proposals and 19 proposed new administrative structures. Some recommendations were: allow police to carry semi-automatic handguns; appoint an independent ombudsman to oversee how complaints against police are investigated; dissolve the British Columbia Police Commission; and create a new law enforcement branch to oversee police activities. The British Columbia Police Commission ceased in 1998 after passage of the Police Amendment Act, 1997 in July 1997. Most of the Commission's functions were transferred to the Police Services Division, Ministry of Attorney General. The Police Amendment Act, 1997 also set up the Office of the Police Complaint Commissioner, an independent agency reporting directly to the Legislative Assembly. The Office was responsible for overseeing complaints against municipal police to ensure they were handled fairly and impartially.

"February 28, 1993"
Report submitted to Attorney General.
Not tabled.
On May 12, 1992, Daniel Possee was shot to death by police searching for marijuana. In response to the jury's findings in the Daniel Possee Coroner's inquest, the Commissioner was asked to provide an interim report on the issue of police investigating police and whether the present structure of civilian oversight of police was adequate. In particular, he was asked to make interim recommendations on the investigation of police incidents and the execution of search warrants. Justice Wally Oppal issued his Interim report on February 28, 1993, half way through his investigation. This report outlined the seven main issues raised through public hearings and written submissions. These were: discontent about the complaint investigation and adjudication system; concern about the unwarranted use of force without the necessary accountability; the public desire for increased community policing; the lack of consensus on the effectiveness of regionalization of policing; the need for improvement in the selection, training and promotion of police officers; the criticism of the police process for obtaining and executing warrants on private residences; and lack of programs for aboriginal policing.

The Commissioner concluded that there was no conflict of interest, real or apparent, and recommended administrative procedural changes with respect to the investment of government funds.

255 History and mandate:

Appointed by Order in Council no. 910, dated July 9, 1993.

Commissioner: Lloyd G. McKenzie.

1993. BRITISH COLUMBIA. MCKENZIE INQUIRY. REPORT

256 British Columbia. McKenzie Inquiry.

Commissioner: Lloyd G. McKenzie.

Commissioner Lloyd McKenzie was appointed to inquire into an incident ten years previous in the Vancouver City Jail on November 16, 1983. William (Bill) Marshall was the senior duty officer in charge of the Vancouver City Jail in 1983 when Constable Peter Parlevliet struck a drunken prisoner, Alfred Richard Mountain, with a baton. The incident was never properly recorded or passed on to Internal Investigations, in accordance with departmental procedures. McKenzie heard from more than 40 witnesses during the Inquiry's public hearings. Testimony at the inquiry suggested a cover-up. Parlevliet was found not guilty in January 1994 on criminal charges in connection with the assault after testifying he struck the man to subdue him but did not intend to hurt him. Early in 1994 Vancouver's police chief, Bill Marshall, submitted his resignation after the McKenzie Inquiry found that he had ultimate responsibility that night in 1983, and that he was negligent in his duties and clearly responsible for the failure of police to investigate properly the assault allegation. The police board allowed Marshall to take early retirement rather than leave the police force in limbo, without a police chief, until the Inquiry report was completed. McKenzie also found that Sergeant Linde and Acting Staff Sergeant Smith defaulted in their responsibilities, though to a lesser degree. Alfred Mountain died in 1993 of alcohol and heroin poisoning, before the final report was completed. As a result of the McKenzie Inquiry findings the Attorney General asked David Edgar, Chair of the British Columbia Police Commission, to undertake a follow-up audit of the Vancouver Police Department. The Police Commission's initial audit, conducted in May - June 1993, was published in 1994.

"May 31, 1994"

As a result of the McKenzie Inquiry findings the Attorney General asked the British Columbia Police Commission to review the policies and procedures the Vancouver Police Department used to maintain the confidentiality of information about individuals and investigations. The Commission found these procedures to be generally adequate. The Police Commission was also asked to review how allegations against a Chief Constable were investigated. The Police Commission recommended several amendments to the Police Act and to the Police (Discipline) Regulation to allow the Provincial Complaints Commissioner to investigate allegations made against a chief constable. At that time, only chairs of police boards had that responsibility. The Attorney General deferred action on these recommendations until the completion of Justice Wally Oppal's Commission of Inquiry into Policing in British Columbia.

Commissioner James Matkin outlined both the circumstances and concerns regarding the administration of the Vancouver Stock Exchange which had been voiced during a policy review process. These included the quality of listed companies, manipulative trading practices and insider trading, misconduct and supervision of brokers, abusive promotional practices, administrative and regulatory performance, media coverage of the market, adequacy of civil remedies and the prosecution of criminal offences. (p. 1).

"James G. Matkin, Commissioner"
Includes bibliographical references.

James Matkin, the Commissioner, was a Vancouver lawyer, a former president and CEO of the Business Council of British Columbia, as well as a former Deputy Minister of Labour and then of Intergovernmental Relations in the British Columbia Government. In the first public inquiry into the Vancouver Stock Exchange in its eighty-year history, and after years of negative publicity, Matkin was appointed to examine and make recommendations on the responsibilities of the Vancouver Stock Exchange to regulate the securities market and the adequacy of its powers and activities to meet these responsibilities. The British Columbia Securities Commission was to be similarly reviewed. Recommendations were to be made on the adequacy of civil remedies; the effectiveness of offence provisions available under the Securities Act; as well as the allocation of resources required for criminal prosecution of securities-related offences. The final report recommended significant restructuring of the provincial securities regulation system, "reforms necessary to promote public confidence in the honesty, fairness and efficiency of the B.C. securities market". (p. i). The most contentious of the Commissioner's nineteen recommendations were: replacing the British Columbia Securities Commission with a securities exchange board similar to one in the United Kingdom; amending the Securities Act to give the Securities Commission or its successor rule-making authority; and the appointment of independent adjudicators to conduct hearings and render decisions. To provide better protection for investors, the Government initiated numerous legislative and regulatory reforms. In October 1994 the Government set up a Securities Fraud Office to strengthen investigations and prosecution of securities offences. In June 1995, the British Columbia Securities Commission's rule-making powers and enforcement tools were enhanced with the passage of the Securities Amendment Act, 1995 and the Securities Amendment Act, no. 2, 1995.

http://www.llbc.leg.bc.ca/public/PubDocs/bcdocs/231332/index.htm

The background to this inquiry was described by Justice Thomas Gove in the executive summary of his report: "On October 3, 1986, Matthew John Vaudreuil was born in the northern British Columbia community of Fort St. John. Five and a half years later, on July 9, 1992, he died in Vancouver. Throughout his life he was a client of the Ministry of Social Services. The public learned some of the details of his life and death in the Spring of 1994, after his mother pled guilty to his manslaughter. Many people were outraged. Some called for accountability and others demanded the resignations of public officials who were involved. On May 17, 1994, the Honourable Joy MacPhail, Minister of Social Services, addressed the Legislative Assembly. She filed a copy of the Superintendent of Family and Child Service's report into Matthew's life and death. The report said that Matthew suffered from neglect and abuse throughout his short life, and that services and programs intended to protect him failed to do so. The report concluded that Matthew should have been removed from his family home. At the same time, the minister introduced two new statutes that said would help to address the problems identified in the report. The Information and Accountability Act and the Child, Family and Community Service Act. The Ombudsman: Annual report 1996, section: Follow-up : Ombudsreport 1995 : after Gove. p. 21).

In November 1995 Judge Gove issued his report to Government. His complete report comprised two volumes, "Matthew's Story " and "Matthew's Legacy". In his Letter of Transmittal Gove wrote: "Matthew's Story' paints as clear a picture as possible of the events of Matthew's life and death. Parts of the story are only sketches, but overall an unmistakable pattern emerges of a boy routinely neglected, and emotionally and physically abused. Through it all, he was not protected - not by his mother, not by his community and not by those charged with protecting British Columbia's children." The concluding words of his comment were: "I am calling for radical change. I have no illusions about how difficult this will be... The choice is clear. We can tinker, knowing that tinkering cannot restore a flawed system. Or we can, together, build a new child welfare system that puts children in the centre. This would be Matthew's Legacy."

In her section titled: "Follow-up : Ombudsreport 1995, after Gove", published in her 1996 Annual report (p. 21), Ombudsman Dulcie McCallum summarized the Gove Inquiry as follows: Judge Gove "identified that public services to children were fragmented and that the lack of integration meant children 'fell through the cracks'. He made over one hundred recommendations to bring about significant changes in the way the government delivers services to children. He recommended a complete restructuring of public services to make them principle-based, universal, accountable, efficient and child-centred. Central to this new child welfare system was integration. Judge Gove recommended that a Minister for Children and Families be appointed to co-ordinate integrated services for children. He also recommended that government appoint a Transition Commissioner to oversee the implementation of his recommendations over a three-year period. The Ombudsman agreed to his recommendation that she monitor government's progress in implementing these proposed reforms. On January 29, 1996 Ms. Cynthia Morton, former Deputy Minister of Education, was appointed for a term of three years, to take the province through the transition to an integrated child welfare system. On September 17, 1996 Ms. Morton [Transmission Commissioner for Child and Youth Services] submitted a report [British Columbia's child, youth and family serving system : recommendations for change] to Premier Glen Clark, recommending that changes not wait for the three years ... The Premier appointed Ms. Morton to be the Children's Commissioner with a mandate to review immediately deaths of children, past and present.... On September 23, 1996, nearly six years after the release of the Ombudsman's report recommending integration of public services for children, [Ombudsman Public Report No. 22 (1990): Public services to children, youth and their families in British Columbia : the need for integration], the Premier announced the creation of the first Ministry for Children and Families...responsible for the delivery of services for children formerly provided by the Ministries of Health, Education, Attorney General, Women's Equality and Social Services." (British Columbia: Office of the Ombudsman. Annual report 1996, section: Follow-up : Ombudsreport 1996 : after Gove, p. 21).

In 1996 the Legislative Assembly established the Members Committee on the Response to the Gove Report. The work of this committee was continued from 1996 through 1998 by the Special Committee on the Response to the Gove Report. The Legislative Assembly in 1996 passed the Child, Youth and Family Advocacy Act (R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 40). Also in 1996 the Legislative Assembly's Special Committee to Appoint a Child, Youth and Family Advocate selected an advocate to oversee the newly established Office of the Child, Youth and Family Advocate, an independent officer reporting directly to the Legislative Assembly. The Children's Commission Act (S.B.C. 1997, c. 11) was passed in 1997, formalizing Cynthia Morton's appointment as an independent officer of the Legislative Assembly. In 2002 both the Office of the Child, Youth and Family Advocate and the

316 Prowse Commission of Inquiry (B.C.)
Report on the transfer of Daniel Michael Perrault to the New Haven Correctional Centre / Prowse Commission of Inquiry ; Jo-Ann E. Prowse, Commissioner. -- [Vancouver, B.C.] : The Commission,
In February 1991 twenty-year-old Daniel Perrault beat an elderly night manager to death. As a young offender he was sentenced to 3 years at the Willingdon Youth Detention Centre. In July 1993 Perrault failed to return to Willingdon from a temporary absence pass. He turned himself in 10 days later; pleaded guilty to the escape, and was sentenced as an adult to 45 days imprisonment. After completing his escape sentence he was transferred to New Haven, an open custody correctional facility in Burnaby. Ten days later he walked away. After being unlawfully at large for almost a month he broke into a Surrey apartment and sexually assaulted a 28 year-old woman. He was arrested two days later and was sentenced to 14 years. (Cf. p. iii). "Public outrage at Mr. Perrault's transfer to New Haven and allegations of "cover-up" and "deals" led to the appointment" of this Inquiry. (p. iii). To restore public confidence in the correctional system, Justice Jo-Ann Prowse was appointed to inquire into and report "on the process and procedure followed by the Ministry of Attorney General in determining to transfer Daniel Michael Perrault to the New Haven Correctional Centre, and any public safety issues." (Order in Council no. 506, 1994). As well as appointing the Commission, the Attorney General introduced an amendment to the Correction Act to establish a new Investigation, Inspection and Standards Office which would investigate corrections incidents and complaints. This new Office would be independent of the Corrections Branch and report directly to the Attorney General. The Commissioner's report dispelled allegations of a cover-up but found that some staff made serious errors in judgement in the placement of Perrault. The Attorney General instructed the Corrections Branch to implement an objective risk management process throughout the youth and adult correctional system. He also expected that current proposed amendments to the federal Youth Offenders Act would require violent young offenders to be tried and sentenced in adult court. In August 1994 four employees of the Corrections Branch were disciplined for their infractions in policy and procedure in the management of the Perrault case.

Report by Brian Smith.

In February 1996 public concern was raised about the International Power Corporation's share offering and particularly the purchase of shares by then BC Hydro Chairman, John Laxton, as well as senior Hydro executives, their families, and prominent individuals connected to the New Democratic Party. International Power Corporation (IPC) was a private sector company created to provide capital investment in B.C. Hydro's international power projects, including the Raiwind Project in Pakistan. On February 23, 1996 Premier Glen Clark appointed Brian Smith Chair of B.C. Hydro. The Premier requested Smith to carry out an immediate review of the IPC share offering and investments in the company. The interim report released April 24, 1996 found that then Hydro Chair John Laxton had purchased IPC shares in spite of clear and repeated instructions from then Minister responsible Glen Clark that board members were prohibited from investing in IPC. However, no such instructions had been given to Hydro employees or their families. To the contrary, Laxton had publicly and repeatedly encouraged employees and management to buy shares. (BC Hydro news release April 24, 1996: International Power Corporation interim report released).

Unfortunately the IPC share offering failed and Laxton was found to have secretly arranged to invest US $1.2 million to salvage the offering, concealing his share holding through an offshore company. The report notes Hydro lacked timely and adequate reporting systems to Government through the Crown Corporations and Cabinet Secretariats. Additionally the Raiwind project, as Hydro's first international equity investment partnership, lacked a strong review process and follow-up by Government. On September 26, 1996 corporate lawyer and former Superintendent of Brokers, Neil de Gelder, and Victoria lawyer Chris Considine were appointed as commissioners under the Inquiry Act.

The inquiry was appointed "to inquire into and report to the Minister of Employment and Investment on the state and management of the business of the British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority and the conduct of any person in the service of the British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority so far as the conduct relates to the official duties of that person respecting the Authority." (Order in Council). The Interim report released in April 1996 addressed the major issues of the IPC share offering, except policy recommendations and highlighted matters of immediate concern to the public about the involvement of Cayman Island companies and the intermingling of public and private interests in the project. (Final report, p. 2). The final report released in March 1997 outlined the scope of the work undertaken; provided a description of the history and structure of the Raiwind Project; included a discussion of the role played by offshore corporations in the project; reviewed the rationale for private sector participation in the project; examined the commercial and financial aspects of the project; reviewed issues that arose for BC Hydro on standards of conduct and conflicts of interest; reviewed issues that arose for government and BC Hydro on corporate governance and accountability for BC Hydro and its subsidiary, B.C. Hydro International (BCHIL); and provided a summary of the Review Team's principal investigative findings and recommendations. Comprehensive standards of conduct and guidelines on conflict of interest were recommended for BC Hydro executives and employees. (Final report, p. 3).

1996. BRITISH COLUMBIA. CHILDREN'S COMMISSIONER.

327 History and mandate:

Appointed under the Inquiry Act, Part 1 by Order in Council no. 1073, September 23, 1996.
Commissioner: Cynthia Morton.

Commission name supplied by compiler for purposes of this Checklist.

The Children's Commission Act (S.B.C. 1997, c. 11) came into force in July 1997. The Children's Commissioner appointed under the above Order in Council continued to serve as commissioner under this new Act. Under the Order in Council Morton was appointed "as a commissioner to inquire into and report to the Attorney General on the cause of death of any child that dies in British Columbia and to ascertain whether further or better action by or on behalf of the Ministry of Children and Families or any other branch or institution of the executive arm of the government of British Columbia should have [been] taken". (Order in Council no. 1073, 1996).

In this Checklist the term "Children's Commissioner" is used to distinguish the Commissioner's work under the Inquiry Act from her work after the passage of the new Children's Commission Act. This Checklist does not include the publications of the ongoing British Columbia Children's Commission, which was created in 1997 and ceased in July 2002, when its functions were absorbed into the newly created Office of Children and Youth and the provincial Coroners Services (see Office for Children and Youth Act, S.B.C. 2002, c. 50, s. 22).

In response to recommendations of the 1994 Gove Inquiry on Child Protection Cynthia Morton, former Deputy Minister of Education, was appointed January 29, 1996 for a three-year term to take the province through the transition to an integrated child welfare system. On September 17, 1996 Morton's Transition Commission for Child and Youth Services submitted this report to Premier Glen Clark, recommending that changes not wait for the three years. On September 23, 1996 Premier Glen Clark announced the creation of a new Ministry of Children and Families to integrate the child and family programs of the ministries of Social Services, Health, Attorney General, Education and Women's Equality. In addition, the Premier announced the creation of a new independent children's commissioner. He appointed Cynthia Morton "as a commissioner to inquire into and report to the Attorney General on the cause of death of any child that dies in British Columbia and to ascertain whether further or better action by or on behalf of the Ministry of Children and Families or any other branch or institution of the executive arm of the government of British Columbia should have [been] taken". (Order in Council no. 1073, 1996). Morton was appointed under Part 1 of the Inquiry Act, reporting to the Attorney General and Minister Responsible for Multiculturalism, Human Rights and Immigration. In May 1997 the Government introduced the Children's Commission Act (S.B.C. 1997, c.11) which would ensure a comprehensive fatality review and external complaint process for children. Morton continued her appointment as children's commissioner under the new Act.

In the matter of the Inquiry Act, R.S.B.C. 1996, Chapter 224 and, In the matter of a commission appointed by Order in Council the 27th day of March 1997, to inquire into the regulation of the use of charitable gaming proceeds and assets of societies in British Columbia including activities of the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society and any other politically-linked organizations.

THIS RECORD IS FOR INFORMATION ONLY. The report is in the British Columbia Provincial Archives. IT IS SEALED BY COURT ORDER. Supreme Court Justice Ray Paris ruled on December 3, 2004 to keep the report sealed. The Judge ruled the draft report was "the unfinished work of a rescinded public inquiry".

The Commission of Inquiry into the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society and Uses of Gaming Proceeds, also known as the Smith Inquiry, was created April 24, 1996 "as a result of information that had come to the attention of provincial government authorities that a society called the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society had over the course of many years diverted proceeds from bingo games which it conducted to legally non-permitted uses. By the combination of the provisions of the Criminal Code related to gaming and provincial government regulations in British Columbia, 25 percent of the gross proceeds of such gaming had to be paid out for charitable purposes. A forensic audit conducted at the instance of the provincial government by Mr. Ron Parks disclosed that, during the 1980s in particular, over 80 percent of the funds that should have been paid out to charities were diverted back to NCHS and used mainly to pay off debts arising from two real estate ventures, as well as for some other non-legitimate purposes." (British Columbia Supreme Court decision: Citation: British Columbia (Attorney General) v. British Columbia (Information and Privacy Commissioner) et al., 2004 BCSC 1597. Date: 20041203. Docket: L031378. Registry: Vancouver. Introduction, section 3: The history of the Smith Commission of Inquiry). The Commission's terms of reference were to investigate the activities of the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society and related entities and any other politically-linked...

organization; to inquire into the adequacy of rules and restrictions governing the use of proceeds from licensed gaming; to examine the use of proceeds from gaming for political purposes; to inquire into the adequacy of past and present rules and restrictions governing the use of proceeds from licensed gaming; to inquire into existing legislation; and to make recommendations for better regulation, including the form and content of legislation and administrative measures that may be necessary to implement these recommendations. “In early 1997 because of ill health, the original Commissioner, Nathan T. Nemetz (previously the Chief Justice of British Columbia) was replaced by Mr. Murray Smith, who had been legal counsel to the Commission. The original due date for the filing of the report of the Commission (March 31, 1997) was extended a total of six times, the last extension being to August 31, 2001.” (British Columbia Supreme Court decision: Citation: British Columbia (Attorney General) v. British Columbia (Information and Privacy Commissioner) et al., 2004 BCSC 1597. Date: 20041203. Docket: L031378. Registry: Vancouver: Introduction, section 3: The history of the Smith Commission of Inquiry). The Commission commenced public hearings in 1999, which were later suspended due to ongoing criminal proceedings. In May 2001 the New Democratic Party lost the General Election. On June 22, 2001 the new Liberal Government issued an Order in Council rescinding the Commission which had already lasted for five years. The Attorney General, Geoffrey Plant, issued a statement which said in part the following: “This has been a long process, and it’s time to bring the Smith Commission of Inquiry to an end. I don’t think we’ll learn anything more about gaming in B.C. by giving the commission more time and money.... Since then ... the government has made substantial changes to the face of gaming in the province. The gaming branch and gaming commission have been reorganized, and there are new policies and procedures for licensed charitable gaming. As well, police, ministry staff, and special prosecutors investigated the dealings of the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society, which resulted in charges, convictions and fines. The final report of the commission was to have been due Aug. 31. However, the commission recently requested an extension of four months to Dec. 31 - the seventh extension since it was established. In addition, court proceedings have been launched challenging the commission’s jurisdiction to make adverse findings concerning the conduct of certain officials. The cost of the commission to date is about $6 million, and another $2 million could well be spent by year’s end, including publicly funded legal fees for some of the people who received notices of adverse findings from the commission,” Attorney General Plant continued. “I do not believe the taxpayers would be well served by this additional expenditure and delay. It’s simply not in the interest of the public, or the public purse, to continue with this inquiry. It’s time to close the book on the long nightmare of Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society and move forward.” (News release no. 46, June 22, 2001: "Smith Commission told to wrap up Gaming Inquiry"). In 1999 former New Democratic Party cabinet minister Dave Stupich pleaded guilty to fraud, involving the misappropriation of an estimated $1 million from the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society and was sentenced to serve two years less a day under house arrest.

Supreme Court Justice Ray Paris ruled the interim report of the Commission of Inquiry into the Nanaimo Commonwealth Holding Society and Uses of Gaming Proceeds was a draft report and thus was "the unfinished work of a rescinded public inquiry". He ruled on December 3, 2004 to keep the report sealed.

1996. BRITISH COLUMBIA INQUIRY INTO GASOLINE PRICING.

354 History and mandate:

Appointed under the Inquiry Act by Order in Council no. 0624, May 16, 1996.

Commissioner: Mark K. Jaccard.

British Columbia Archives collection no. GR-3062. Records include correspondence, submissions, research material, clippings, notes and the report.
Retail gasoline prices in British Columbia rose by about 10 cents per litre during the Spring of 1996. In response to public concern the Government appointed Mark Jaccard, the Chair and CEO of the British Columbia Utilities Commission, to investigate gasoline pricing in the Province. His terms of reference were "to examine: factors that contribute to changes in the retail price of gasoline in B.C.; factors underlying the different retail prices charged for gasoline in different areas of B.C.; the fairness of, and economic rationale for, the price structure of gasoline at the refining, wholesale and retail levels in B.C.; the extent to which retail prices of gasoline reflect the cost of crude oil in domestic and international markets; the effectiveness of market competition in regulating gasoline prices to ensure fair prices for consumers; and the government's regulatory authority with respect to petroleum product prices."

(Final report, executive summary, p. i). The Inquiry lasted four months at an estimated cost of $130,000. The Commission issued an interim report on July 5, 1996, laying out the inquiry process and key research questions. It received submissions from stakeholders as well as collecting and analyzing data using its own research staff. On August 28, 1996 the Commission released its preliminary findings and sought feedback from interested parties. Jaccard released the final report on September 30, 1996. The report contained numerous recommendations to improve the fairness of gasoline pricing throughout the Province.

The Royal Commission on Workers' Compensation in British Columbia was mandated to examine the statutory framework, mandate, structure, organization, governance and administration of the provincial workers' compensation system. Through extensive public hearings the Commission sought to identify the strengths and weaknesses of the current system and to define the future of workers' compensation in the province. This royal commission was the fourth to review the compensation system since the three-member Pineo Select Committee of 1915, which had led to the Province's first Workmen's Compensation Act in 1916. The first royal commission, initiated under the Liberal Government of Duff Pattullo, with Chief Justice Gordon Sloan of the Appeal Court of British Columbia as the sole commissioner, was appointed July 1, 1941. It released its report on September 15, 1942. Justice Sloan was appointed by the Byron Johnson Coalition Government to head a second royal commission in June 1949. His report was tabled February 20, 1952. British Columbia's third royal commission on workers' compensation was established on February 1, 1962, with the final report tabled January 27, 1966.

This, the fourth royal commission on workers' compensation, was struck on April 30, 1996. On November 7, 1996 Gurmail Singh Gill, a B.C. Provincial Court Judge, was appointed to head a three-member Commission. The other Commissioners were Oksana Exell, former director of the B.C. and Yukon chapter of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, and Gerry Stoney, former president of the IWA-Canada. The Commission traveled to 38 communities, held 56 public meetings, received 2,036 written submissions, and produced numerous research papers over 26 months. The Commission's goal was to create a more equitable, efficient and effective workers compensation system for all British Columbians. The Commission's first report "Report on sections 2 and 3 (a) of the Commission's terms of reference" was released on October 31, 1997. Its final report, running 1,348 pages, praised the Workers' Compensation Board's fiscal responsibility, but noted the Board lacked direction from its Board of Governors and failed in its mandate to provide fair and equitable benefits to injured workers. The Commissioners recommended improvements to the Workers' Compensation Board's administration and service delivery, as well as suggestions for clarifying and improving delivery of compensation benefits. The Commission's work resulted in amendments to the Workers' Compensation Act and occupational and safety regulations, as well as the implementation of an ongoing system of policy and regulatory review under the direction of the Workers' Compensation Board.

This first report, with more than 60 recommendations, called for a separate occupational health and safety statute that would see the promulgation of regulations shift from the Workers’ Compensation Board (WCB) to the Provincial Government. The report outlined a legislative framework for occupational health and safety, as well as a regulatory review process, which would be ongoing and completed every three years, keeping up with changes in the workplace. More generous fatality benefits were also recommended.

"This report supplements information contained in the report, "Comparative Review of Workers’ Compensation Systems and Governance Models" (Final Report Update, January 12, 1998). It is intended to be read in conjunction with that report in order to provide a comprehensive view of the compensation and adjudication system through the appeals process for the Canadian workers’ compensation systems. The scope of the project included all the Canadian jurisdictions, except for British Columbia. A review of the British Columbia system in these areas would be redundant given the extensive research and review that has been undertaken by other Royal Commission staff and researchers on these issues." - P. In September 1997, nine Premiers and the two Territorial Leaders met in Calgary to consider the state of Canadian unity. Their deliberations ended with the establishment of seven principles which they hoped would guide discussions on renewing the Canadian federation. These principles became known as the Calgary Framework, and each leader committed to return to his Province or Territory to consult with citizens for their views on the Framework. (Report executive summary).

On October 25, 1997, Premier Glen Clark appointed the BC Unity Panel to tour the Province to find out what citizens thought about national unity and British Columbia's place in the federation of Canada. The Unity Panel, consisting of 22 private citizens and elected officials (MLAs and MPs, from all parties), embarked on the most extensive consultation process on national unity in the Province's history. The Panel sought the opinions of British Columbians and heard concerns on other issues deemed important to national unity. The Province's citizens strongly supported the Calgary Declaration and its seven principles. They also identified other issues of importance to them in the national unity debate. The majority wanted Quebec to remain part of Canada. Concerns over the equality of provinces, discrepancies in transfer payments and a lack of British Columbia representation in the federal system were voiced in every part of the Province. (Report letter of transmittal).

On May 19, 1998 the British Columbia Legislative Assembly endorsed the Calgary Framework on Canadian Unity.

The Commission was appointed under the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act, which required that an independent commission be appointed after every second general election to review and make proposals to the Legislative Assembly regarding the Province's electoral districts. The Commission was to make proposals regarding the area, boundaries, names and number (which must not be less than 75 and no more than 81) of electoral districts in British Columbia. (Report, 1998, p. 9). To ensure fair representation the Commission was guided by the principle of representation by population, with the objective being to have an equal number of people in each electoral district (the "electoral quota"). The last changes to British Columbia's electoral boundaries were made in 1989, after the Royal Commission on Electoral Boundaries recommended changes in their final report tabled in December 1989. The 1997 Electoral Boundaries Commission submitted its report to the Legislative Assembly on December 3, 1998. The Commission then held 46 public hearings in 44 different communities. On June 3, 1999 the Commission tabled amendments to their initial report. It recommended an increase from 75 to 79 electoral districts to compensate for population growth in the Lower Mainland. Several other districts were realigned. The Amendments report augmented, but did not supersede the first report, as both reports were intended to be read together. These recommendations were implemented in a new Electoral Districts Act (S.B.C. 1999, c. 31) which received Royal Assent on July 15, 1999. New electoral districts came into effect on April 18, 2001, with the dissolution of the 36th Parliament.

Not tabled.

"At the end of August [1998], a large group of BC fishermen had taken their boats to the water and were preparing to blockade Seymour Narrows near Campbell River to draw attention to their belief that the Department of Fisheries and Oceans had created unnecessary hardship for their families and their communities. These fishermen asked the Federal Minister of Fisheries to listen to their legitimate concerns. He refused to meet with them. On August 27th, the Premier of British Columbia met with the organizing committee of these fishermen in Campbell River. The fishermen agreed not to blockade the Narrows in return for an inquiry into the management of the 1998 fishery. Premier Clark asked me [Peckford] to lead this Inquiry and review the management of the 1998 Fraser River sockeye fishery." (p. 1). In the public hearings and written submissions "people publicly stated their frustration and confusion about what was happening in fishing-dependent communities, and their belief that the Department of Fisheries and Oceans (DFO) was directly responsible." (p. 1). In spite of this, the federal Department of Fisheries and Oceans representatives refused to meet or cooperate with the Commissioner. The initial report contains Peckford's brief analysis of the Fraser River fishery and some observations on the current situation. He recommended that the federal government provide financial assistance to fishermen, crew and processing plant workers who had been adversely affected by the Department of Fisheries and Oceans 1998 Fraser River Sockeye Plan. He also recommended that the federal and provincial governments establish a joint working arrangement to develop policies and programs for the Pacific salmon fishery. The Pacific Salmon Treaty between the United States and Canada should also be reviewed.

"The Peckford Inquiry."
Not tabled.

Brian Peckford, former Premier of Newfoundland, was appointed August 27, 1998 to find solutions to the mounting frustration expressed by fishermen and workers in the fishing industry. This frustration was largely directed at the federal Department of Fisheries and Ocean's management and conservation policies. During the Commission's public hearings the themes of accountability, independence, sharing of decision making, and the aboriginal fishery recurred as major concerns. The final report contained 38 recommendations. He urged the federal government to provide similar compensation programs to fishermen and their families on the Pacific coast that they provided on the East coast when government actions created similar hardship. He reiterated his recommendations from his initial report regarding federal-provincial cooperation, and that Pacific Salmon Treaty negotiations with the United States be re-activated. Substantive and meaningful consultations with the First Nations were essential. "Frankly put, the salmon fishery will not work effectively without the full and active participation of the First Nations. Furthermore, there must be direct local involvement [of] native and non-native in the management of this fishery." (p. 31). Peckford proposed "the establishment, with the approval of First Nations, the Government of Canada and the Government of British Columbia, a new Agency that would replace the existing functions of the Department of Fisheries and Oceans and the newly created Provincial Ministry of Fisheries. The new Agency would be established through legislation of the Parliament of Canada and the Legislative Assembly of British Columbia, and it would be located in British Columbia. (p. 30-31). Peckford concluded "The most important over riding [sic] point of this exercise is a new structure, with specific local, communal power sharing with other partners and individual ownership, encompassed in the principles of sustainability and bio-diversity". (p. 44).

494 British Columbia. Perry Commission.

"February 23, 1998"
Pagebrook, Inc. wanted to build a large-scale resort, including a marina, golf course, and 950 units of housing on Six Mile Ranch, located west of Kamloops on the shores of Kamloops Lake. The proposal would require that a portion of the land to be excluded from the Agricultural Land Reserve. Pagebrook applied to the Agricultural Land Commission for this exclusion. The ALC determined the proposal was unsuitable for the site and rejected the applications for exclusion and for special use of ALR land. After rejection of the proposal the Ministry of Agriculture retained Murray Rankin, a Victoria lawyer, to assist in developing a revised proposal. Rankin completed his report in December 1997, in which he recommended that Cabinet should declare the proposal to be in the ‘provincial interest’. Cabinet exercised their discretion under Agricultural Land Commission Act, sections 39-43 to declare the proposal of ‘provincial interest’. Although their declaration was “final and binding” according to section 42(2) of the ALC Act, Cabinet appointed David Perry on January 16, 1998 to investigate the application through a public hearing process. "The mandate of such a Commission of Inquiry is significantly wider than that given to the ALC, as the Inquiry must investigate "probable environmental, economic, social, cultural and heritage effects, and, without limitation, the agricultural effects" of the application (s. 43(1) of the ALC Act."

The Commissioner held hearings in Kamloops and Vancouver and received more than 600 oral and written submissions. Perry recommended that Cabinet approve the proposal for a resort on Six Mile Ranch, however if certain requirements and time frames were not met, Cabinet should withdraw its approval. The Commissioner recommended some steps to ensure the Perry Commission did not become a precedent for developers to avoid the Agricultural Land Reserve. They "included creating a definition of 'provincial interest' with the help of the Agricultural Land Commission and incorporating the definition into the Agricultural Land Commission Act or its regulations; appointing an environmental assessment board; and clarifying the balancing test of competing interests that form 'provincial interest'." (British Columbia. Perry Commission. Six Mile Ranch recommendations released, February 27, 1998 (news release)).

1998. BRITISH COLUMBIA. SKYTRAIN EXTENSION REVIEW. SPECIAL COMMISSION. REPORTS

Commissioner: Derek Thompson.

Not tabled.

In June of 1998 the British Columbia Government announced that SkyTrain would be extended along the Broadway-Lougheed-Coquitlam-New Westminster corridor. On September 17, 1998, (with terms of reference dated September 16, 1998) Cathy McGregor, Minister of Environment, Lands and Parks and Minister responsible for the Environmental Assessment Office, established an independent review by Special Commissioner Derek Thompson to address environmental issues related to the construction and operation of the Lower Mainland’s new SkyTrain link. Thompson, the assistant deputy minister responsible for the Land Use Co-ordination Office, had 25 years experience with land use and community consultation processes around the Province. Project Assessment Director David Johns of the British Columbia Environmental Assessment Office and his staff assisted the Commissioner and provided technical and administrative support. “In appointing the Special Commissioner the provincial Cabinet framed a mandate for the SkyTrain Review.” (Interim report, Terms of Reference, p. 14). The provincial government made the decision to use ALRT (SkyTrain) technology and to accelerate the rapid transit project, and had set up the Rapid Transit Project Office to undertake the construction of the new SkyTrain. The Commission’s mandate was to review environmental issues related to construction and operation of the proposed SkyTrain project; to oversee a public consultation process to provide advice and recommendations on SkyTrain routes and related environmental impacts; to develop recommendations for preventing and mitigating any environmental impacts; and to continue to provide ongoing independent follow-up and monitoring throughout the design phase of the project. The Commissioner issued an Interim Report in December 1998 and its final report in May 1999. The final report identified the potential environmental impacts of the SkyTrain extension project and outlined what actions were required by the Rapid Transit Project Office in order to meet federal and provincial standards. The Commissioner also developed a proposal for a Community Legacy Program to provide lasting benefits for the neighbourhoods along the new route. This program included a regional greenway network for walking and cycling. The Commissioner also recommended that the Government confirm their commitment to future completion of the "T" line to Coquitlam and Port Moody.

Dave Barrett, former Premier of British Columbia under the New Democratic Party Government 1972-1975 was appointed to review "the adequacy of protection, and accountability to, consumers for faulty condominium construction, and to determine the reasons for, and the factors contributing to, faulty construction". (Order in Council). The Commission was also asked to recommend any measures needed to ensure consumer protection and accountability for this construction. The Commission was created in response to public pressure for the Government to address the "leaky condo" situation in which water damage was making condominiums unlivable. The public wanted to know who was at fault and who was going to pay for the huge repair bills facing owners. The Commission held extensive public hearings and received numerous written submissions. "Presentations were made by condominium owners, strata council representatives as well as individuals, and groups involved in various public and private sector aspects of the industry. In total, more than 730 written submissions were received. In addition, the Commission reviewed existing legislation, public and private reports, and the approaches of other jurisdictions regarding effective residential construction activity." (Final report, Executive summary). The Commissioner's report included proposed draft legislation. The Government responded by enacting the Homeowner Protection Act (R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 196) and setting up the Homeowner Protection Office.

Commissioner: H.A.D. Oliver.

Commission name established by Compiler for purpose of this Checklist.

On March 5, 1999 Premier Glen Clark asked the Conflict of Interest Commissioner, H.A.D. Oliver, to investigate whether he was in a conflict of interest in his Government's granting of approval-in-principle for a proposed charitable casino for the North Burnaby Inn. On March 17, 1999 Oliver received the same request from Cabinet, acting at Clark's behest, to conduct a full investigation and inquiry into whether the Premier was in a conflict of interest in granting a conditional charity casino licence to the North Burnaby Inn. A request under s.19 of the Members' Conflict of Interest Act entitled the Commissioner to conduct an inquiry, with the same powers to summon witnesses and documents and question witnesses under oath as a Commissioner appointed under the Inquiry Act.

On March 5, 1999 Premier Glen Clark asked the Conflict of Interest Commissioner, H.A.D. Oliver, to investigate his role in a casino licence granting matter. On March 17, 1999 Oliver received a request from Cabinet, acting at Clark's behest, to conduct a full investigation and inquiry into whether the premier was in a conflict of interest in the granting of a conditional charity casino licence to the North Burnaby Inn. A request under s.19 of the Members' Conflict of Interest Act (R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 287) entitled the Commissioner to conduct an inquiry, with the same powers to summon witnesses and documents and question witnesses under oath as a Commissioner appointed under the Inquiry Act. The last such full-fledged inquiry conducted by a Conflict of Interest Commissioner was in 1991 when then-Commissioner Ted Hughes [Hughes Inquiry] found Premier Bill Vander Zalm was in conflict for mixing personal and government business in the sale of Fantasy Gardens Inc. This led to the Premier's resignation. On November 19, 2002 Oliver presented his opinion report to the Legislative Assembly, finding that "Mr. Clark breached section 3 of the Act, by exercising an official power when he was in an apparent conflict of interest, and section 7 of the Act, by accepting a personal benefit that was connected directly or indirectly with the performance of his duties of office". (Opinion, January 25, 2001). As to a monetary penalty Oliver noted: "In considering an appropriate monetary penalty in this case, however, it is my conclusion that little need be added to the penalty which has been imposed by the course of events. The criminal investigation in relation to this matter led to Mr. Clark's resignation as Premier. He has thus already paid the ultimate political price. In addition, Mr. Clark has now been charged criminally and will face the adverse publicity of a public trial." (p. 90). In the criminal trial that followed Glen Clark was subsequently found not guilty.

Consists of Letter from PricewaterhouseCoopers outlining the casino request-for-proposals. Also correspondence between the provincial government and the proponents of the North Burnaby Inn.

and accountability to homeowners for faulty condominium construction; the causes for the financial failure of New Home Warranty of British Columbia Inc.; and the impacts on homeowners, the industry and the economy because of this situation. The Commission was to make recommendations for necessary changes in legislation, regulations, and administrative practices. The reconvening of the inquiry was precipitated by the failure of New Home Warranty of British Columbia Inc., (NHW), the province’s primary insurer of new residential construction. The Commission held 50 public hearings, heard 180 presenters and received 336 submissions. In his final report Barrett urged immediate financial support for homeowners, many facing financial disaster as a result of the "leaky condo syndrome" and proposed that compensation and reconstruction funds be set up. In response to the report findings, the Government improved construction industry licensing requirements, required mandatory third-party home warranty insurance for builders, and offered no-interest reconstruction loans to qualified applicants.

The Inquiry was called to resolve a dispute with the Province's doctors that had resulted in doctors withdrawing their services from 18 hospitals to protest low on-call pay, lack of funding to recruit and retain doctors and poor hospital resources. A government-appointed mediation team recommended little more than the $40-million package doctors had already rejected. (Times Colonist, Friday, December 22, 2000, p. A4: "B.C. commissioner recommends changes in bargaining for doctors"). Judith Korbin was appointed sole commissioner to "inquire into how the Provincial Government and health authorities should enter into contractual relationships with medical practitioners to (a) serve the public interest, and (b) provide certainty and continuity in the provision of patient care". (Order in Council). She was also asked to recommend the elements that should be included in such contracts, and to suggest changes, if any, to Acts or regulations to implement her recommendations. The Commissioner recommended balancing the rights of the public to be provided with doctors' services with the right of doctors to be paid reasonably. She reported that a sufficient annual budget for doctors' services and remuneration was necessary. A joint working committee should be established to deal with outstanding issues. An independent public body should be established to settle contractual issues if the parties were unable to resolve problems themselves.

2001. CARRIER LUMBER INQUIRY.

547 History and mandate:
Commission name supplied by Compiler for purposes of this checklist. No official report published.

No Order in Council was made to officially appoint Chief Justice Bryan Williams as commissioner, although Premier Ujjal Dosanjh announced on February 29, 2001 that he had asked former Chief Justice Bryan Williams to undertake an inquiry into the Carrier Lumber controversy. Confusion arose when Williams, in a brief written statement, wrote: "I advised him that I would not take it on at that time because an inquiry should not be undertaken until the matters before the court had been resolved and all police reviews had been completed." After the completion of legal matters, which could take more than a year, Williams would, if asked, consider conducting an inquiry. (The Vancouver Sun, Saturday, March 10, 2001, p. A3: Premier's choice to head Carrier probe won't do it, by Jim Beatty). The Carrier Inquiry was prompted by a British Columbia Supreme Court ruling on July 29, 1999, when Justice Glen Parrett ruled that the Government wrongly broke its contract with Carrier Lumber Ltd. when it cancelled the company's forest licence, apparently to appease two First Nations bands, the Nemiah and the Ulkatcho, which claimed the logging area as their own. Parrett called the Government's actions arrogant, deceitful, duplicitous and unethical. He also found that the Government failed to disclose more than 2000 pages of relevant documents to the court. On August 24, 1999 the Government launched an appeal of Parrett's judgement. In February, 2001, after 18 months work on the appeal, the Government dropped its case after more than 44 boxes of documents were found in a basement storage room of the Ministry of Forests' Office in Victoria. (The Vancouver Sun, Thursday, March 1, 2001, p. D3: Premier established inquiry into Carrier fiasco, by Jim Beatty). On February 6, 2001 the Government announced an agreement to resolve the long-standing dispute through mediation. With this effort to reach an out-of-court settlement, as well as an investigation by the RCMP commercial crime squad that the Government had withheld evidence in the case, the Premier agreed that the inquiry was on hold. (The Vancouver Sun, Saturday, March 10, 2001, p. A18: Dosanjh botches an old Glen Clark tactic, by Vaughn Palmer).

2003. BRITISH COLUMBIA. CITIZENS' ASSEMBLY ON ELECTORAL REFORM.

History and mandate:

Appointed by Premier Gordon Campbell, assisted by Attorney General Geoffrey Plant, by a Motion unanimously passed in the Legislative Assembly on April 30, 2003. A special committee of the Legislative Assembly was established to review the Citizens' Assembly staffing and mandate. The Special Committee on the Citizens' Assembly on Electoral Reform refined the Premier's initial terms of reference on May 16, 2003. The Electoral Reform Referendum Act (S.B.C. 2004, c. 7) assented to May 20, 2004 further established electoral reform procedures.

Commission chair: Jack Blaney.

Commissioners: 161 citizens of British Columbia randomly selected, using the British Columbia voters list. The initial selection was balanced as to gender, age and geographical make-up. Two members, one man and one woman, were selected from every electoral district. The full list of members is printed in the final report.

Selected major reports of the Citizens' Assembly are included in this compilation. For a more complete listing please refer to the Citizens' Assembly's website archive on DVD and also the British Columbia Legislative Library's online catalogue.

Premier Gordon Campbell promised in 2001 that, if elected, his government would establish a citizens' assembly on electoral reform. In September 2002, the Government appointed Gordon Gibson to advise on the mandate and make-up of a citizens' assembly. Mr. Gibson's report: "Report on the Constitution of the Citizens' Assembly on Electoral Reform" led on April 30, 2003 to the creation of the Citizens' Assembly, which was passed by unanimous motion passed in the Legislative Assembly. Gibson's initial recommendation of one member per electoral district was doubled to two members per district. A special committee of the Legislature, the Special Committee on the Citizens' Assembly on Electoral Reform, was established to review selection of the Assembly Chair and senior staff and to receive progress reports. The Committee endorsed the Government's nominee, Jack Blaney, as Chair of the Assembly. Dr. Blaney was a former president of Simon Fraser University and Chair of the Fraser Basin Council. Selection of the 161 citizens followed, based on a random pre-selection from the British Columbia voters list. "Never before in modern history has a democratic government given to unelected, "ordinary" citizens the power to review an important public policy, and then seek from all citizens approval of any proposed changes to that policy. The British Columbia Citizens' Assembly on Electoral Reform has had this power and responsibility and, throughout its life, complete independence from government." (Citizens' Assembly Final report, p. 1).

The Assembly's "mandate was to assess different models for electing members of the Legislative Assembly and to recommend whether the current system for provincial elections should be retained or whether a new model should be adopted. Elsewhere, such a task has been given to politicians or to electoral experts. Instead, British Columbia chose to make history and to give this task to the voters." (Citizens' Assembly Final report, p. 1). For eleven months the Assembly studied voting systems, held 50 public hearings and received 1,603 written submissions. The Assembly wanted to learn what values, hopes and desires should underlie the Province's electoral system, before making their recommendation. On March 21, 2004 the Assembly issued a preliminary statement on their findings. On December 10, 2004 the Assembly submitted its final report and recommendations to the people and Government of British Columbia. The final report recommended that the First Past the Post electoral system should be replaced with the Assembly's BC-STV model.

A referendum was held on May 17, 2005, as part of the provincial general election. To pass the referendum required at least 60% overall voter approval as well as approval of more than 50% in at least 48 (60%) of the Province's 79 electoral districts. "Based on the final results, only one of the required thresholds was met. Voters voted 'yes' by more than 50% in 77 of 79 electoral districts. Of the total valid votes cast, 57.69% voted 'yes' on the referendum question." (Elections British Columbia news release, June 9, 2005: Chief Electoral Officer announces results of the referendum on electoral reform.). Since only one of the two thresholds required under section 3(2) of the Electoral Reform Referendum Act (S.B.C. 2004, c. 47) was met, the referendum did not pass.

In September 2002 Premier Gordon Campbell's Government appointed Gordon Gibson to outline how a citizens' assembly should be chosen, function and be structured. This report provided the blueprint for setting up the Citizens' Assembly. The report was released April 28, 2003, along with the Government's response to the recommendations. The primary change to Gibson's initial recommendation was that the suggestion of one member per electoral district was doubled to two members per district.

On November 2, 2005 a Child and Youth Review Panel was appointed to examine the province's system of oversight, public reporting and advocacy with respect to the protection of children and youth. The Panel was appointed to address increasing public concern that children's deaths in the province were not being properly investigated or publicly reported. The deaths of Sherry Charlie and Savannah Brianna Marie Hall, in particular, brought back memories of the death of Matthew Vaudreuil, whose death had resulted in the 1994 Gove Inquiry into Child Protection. As recommended by Judge Thomas Gove, the Inquiry had resulted in the appointment of a permanent Children's Commissioner, as well as a permanent Child, Family and Youth Advocate. Both of these Officers were independent and reported directly to the Legislative Assembly. In 2002 both the Office of the Child, Youth and Family Advocate and the Children's Commission were dissolved and their functions were absorbed by the provincial Coroner's Service and the newly formed Office for Children and Youth (also known as the British Columbia Child and Youth Officer), reporting to the
This Panel was struck to review the effectiveness of this new structure and to recommend improvements. The Commission chair was Ted Hughes, a former Saskatchewan judge who has served as Conflict of Interest Commissioner in British Columbia, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories and was the Chief Adjudicator with respect to settlement of Indian Residential School claims. The other commissioners were: Jane Morley, a lawyer and mediator, who was serving as the British Columbia Child and Youth Officer; Joyce Preston, who served as the Province's Child, Youth and Family Advocate from 1995 to 2001; Tl'az'ten Nation Grand Chief Ed John, a former British Columbia Minister for Children and Families and former law professor who has served six terms on the First Nations Summit political executive; Terry Smith, the provincial Chief Coroner, who was responsible for the independent review of all reportable children's deaths in the province; and Maureen Nicholls, a former commissioner of the Public Service Employee Relations Commission, chair of the Workers' Compensation Board and a former deputy minister. The Honourable Judge Thomas Gove, Commissioner for the 1994 Gove Inquiry into Child Protection, was to be available to provide advice and participate in a consultative process.

The Panel's terms of reference were divided into two parts. For Part 1 the Panel was to examine the system for the review of deaths of children, including the way results of reviews were publicly reported and internally addressed, and was to recommend improvements. For Part 2 the Panel was to examine the roles and responsibilities of the Ministry of Children and Family Development, the Child and Youth Officer, the Chief Coroner, the Ombudsman, the Public Guardian and Trustee as they related to advocacy for children and youth. The Panel was to investigate the roles and responsibilities these institutions had in monitoring and public reporting on the Government's performance in protecting and providing services for children and youth in British Columbia. Improvements were to be recommended. This final report was due by January 31, 2006. Controversy arose surrounding the discovery that the deaths of 713 children had not been properly investigated after the Government dissolved the British Columbia Children's Commission in 2002. On November 18, 2005 the original six-member panel was reconstituted with Ted Hughes as its single member. He was to consult with and seek the expert advice of the other five previously announced panel members mentioned above. The Honourable Thomas Gove would remain available to provide advice and participate in a consultative process. On November 30, 2005 the terms of reference and reporting dates were revised.

On April 7, 2006 Hughes released his final report. Six supplementary reports were released in the months following. "My strongest impression from this review is one of a child welfare system buffeted by an unmanageable degree of change", said Hughes. "The need for equilibrium and stability is a central theme of my report". (News release: Hughes calls for stability in B.C. child protection, April 7, 2006). He continued: "A revolving door in senior leadership positions, major shifts in practice, functions and processes, and significant funding cuts have created a climate of instability and confusion that has only detracted from the Ministry of Children and Families' work on behalf of children". Hughes called for the appointment of a new, independent body to oversee the child welfare system. The Representative for Children and Youth would be appointed as an Officer of the Legislative Assembly for a five-year term, and report to an all-party standing committee. A Special Committee to Appoint a Representative for Children and Youth was struck in response to Hughes recommendations.

Hughes noted the ever-increasing numbers of aboriginal children being taken into care. The child welfare system must find better ways of responding to the needs of the aboriginal community and the aboriginal delegated agencies urgently required better training, equipment and office support. Hughes recommended the Government commit itself to a decentralized child welfare system, "which means supporting it with adequate resources, time, a dedicated team, and budget stabilization". (Report, p. 149). On November 22, 2006 the Province's first Representative for Children and Youth, Mary Ellen Turpel-Lafond, was appointed under the new Representative for Children and Youth Act (S.B.C. 2006, c. 29). After fulfilling an interim role as the Child and Youth Officer, Turpel-Lafond assumed her full responsibilities as the Representative for Children and Youth on April 1, 2007.

2005. BRITISH COLUMBIA. ELECTORAL BOUNDARIES COMMISSION.

History and mandate:

Appointed by Order in Council no. 906, December 13, 2005, pursuant to the Electoral Boundaries
Commission Act (R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 107) and the Electoral Boundaries Commission Amendment Act, 2005 (S.B.C. 2005, c. 30). Order in Council no. 178, March 27, 2006, appointed Stewart Ladyman, replacing Commissioner Burgart.

Commissioners: Bruce Cohen, Stewart Ladyman and Harry Neufeld.

The Electoral Boundaries Commission Act established a permanent three-person commission to review electoral districts of the Province and to report to the Legislature after every second general election. The three commissioners must be as follows: "1) a judge or retired judge of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, and who is nominated by the Lieutenant Governor; 2) a person who is not a member of the Legislative Assembly or an employee of the Government and who is nominated by the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, after consultation with the Premier and the Leader of the Official Opposition; and 3) the Chief Electoral Officer appointed under the Election Act", as required by s. 2(c) of the Act. The Commissioners, so appointed, were respectively, Chief Judge Bruce Cohen, Louise Norma Burgart, a life-long educator and owner/director of Apex Mountain Resort, and Chief Electoral Officer Harry Neufeld. On March 27, 2006 Steward Ladyman, an educator, replaced Commissioner Louise Norma Burgart.

NOTE: This Checklist was published prior to the completion of the electoral district change process. As such this Checklist does not list Commission reports or related reports of interest published after April 2008. Please refer to the Legislative Library's library catalogue for increasing the current 79 electoral districts to 85 was given royal assent on April 10, 2008. The Electoral Districts Act (S.B.C. 2008 c. 14), approved in their place. “The proposals for the North and Cariboo-Thompson Regions are not approved and the alternatives contained in Appendix P of the Report relating to these regions are approved in their place.” (British Columbia Legislative Assembly. Votes and Proceedings of British Columbia, March 13, 2008, p. 1). The Electoral Districts Act (S.B.C. 2008 c. 14), increasing the current 79 electoral districts to 85 was given royal assent on April 10, 2008.

To ensure the province’s electoral boundaries accurately reflected population change over time, the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act required that a review be undertaken after every second general election. The results of the 2005 referendum on electoral reform also showed great public interest in holding another vote on the STV (single transferable vote) voting model recommended by the British Columbia Citizens’ Assembly on Electoral Reform. Under the Electoral Boundaries Commission Amendment Act, 2005 (S.B.C. 2005, c. 30) the 2005 Electoral Boundaries Commission had two tasks. The Commission was to determine what electoral boundaries and representation would look like in the province under an STV system. It was also to examine electoral boundaries and representation under the existing electoral system. With this comparative information the public would be better able to make an informed choice when the next referendum on electoral reform was held. The Act gave the Commission flexibility to recommend up to 85 electoral districts (an increase of six from the current 79 electoral districts) should this be required to protect the representation of northern residents in the Legislature. It also allowed the Commission to recommend up to 85 Members of the Legislative Assembly under STV for the same reason. The Commission must recommend that same number of members under both systems.

An initial report was to be submitted to the Speaker by August 15, 2007 and the final report was to be submitted by February 2008. Originally the referendum was to take place in conjunction with the municipal elections in November 2008. On April 27, 2006 Premier Gordon Campbell announced that, due to administrative and cost concerns raised by the Chief Electoral Officer, the referendum would be held in tandem with the general provincial election on May 12, 2009.

The Commission’s “Preliminary report”, released on October 15, 2007, was not universally well-received. For further details see the listing in this Checklist for the "Preliminary report". Following the release of its "Preliminary report", the Commission held public hearings and received written and oral submissions regarding its proposals for the SMP (single member plurality) and BC-STV (British Columbia - single transferable vote) electoral districts. The final report entitled "Amendments to the preliminary report" was tabled February 14, 2008. This report made approximately 50 amendments to the original report. "Comparing the commission’s final proposals to the Preliminary Report: the number of electoral districts in the Columbia-Kootenay region is increased from three to four; the number of electoral districts in the Vancouver Island and South Coast region is increased from 14 to 15; the number of electoral districts in the North region is unchanged at seven; the number of electoral districts [in] the Cariboo-Thompson region is unchanged at four; and the proposals to add one electoral district in each of the Okanagan, Fraser Valley, Surrey, Burnaby/Tri-Cities, and Vancouver regions are unchanged. This will result in a net increase of four electoral districts, for a total of 83 single member plurality electoral districts. The number of proposed BC-STV electoral districts remains at 20, with the district magnitude of the Columbia-Kootenay electoral district increasing from three to four, and the district magnitude of the Capital Region electoral district increasing from six to seven.” (Commission news release: Electoral Boundaries Commission amends its proposals for British Columbia electoral district boundaries, February 14, 2008). The Commissioners, anticipating that politicians may not adopt their report with reduced northern representation, included an appendix with suggested boundaries for the Cariboo and northern ridings. Legislators could then adopt the main report, with an amendment to preserve two northern seats.

The Commission report also outlined proposed electoral boundaries under a STV (single transferable vote) electoral system, should British Columbians choose to adopt it. On March 6, 2008 the Liberal Government introduced Bill 6, the "Electoral Reform Referendum 2009 Act", requiring the Government to hold a second referendum respecting the single transferable vote electoral system, to be held in conjunction with the next general election on May 12, 2009. For information on the results of the first referendum, held May 17, 2005, see this Checklist under Citizens’ Assembly on Electoral Reform.

On March 13, 2008 the Liberal Government moved a motion, approved unanimously by the Opposition New Democratic Party, to adopt the proposals in the Electoral Boundaries Commission final report, with the following alteration: "The proposals for the North and Cariboo-Thompson Regions are not approved and the alternatives contained in Appendix P of the Report relating to these regions are approved in their place." (British Columbia Legislative Assembly. Votes and Proceedings of British Columbia, March 13, 2008, p. 1). The Electoral Districts Act (S.B.C. 2008 c. 14), increasing the current 79 electoral districts to 85 was given royal assent on April 10, 2008.

Paper version of large-scale maps (also on CD-ROM) deposited at British Columbia Archives.

The Commission's Preliminary report (454 pages) and Preliminary report summary (32 pages) were released August 15, 2007. "After considering more than 150 written submissions, reviewing input from 34 public consultation sessions in 30 communities, listening to presentations from subject-matter specialists, reviewing province-wide and local maps as well as countless hours of deliberation, the commission has proposed adjustments for the boundaries of most of the province's electoral districts." (Commission news release: Electoral Boundaries Commission submits proposals, August 15, 2007) The Commission's proposals included: one less electoral district in the Cariboo-Thompson region, from five districts to four; one less electoral district in the Columbia-Kootenay region, from four districts to three; one less electoral district in the North region, from eight districts to seven; four new electoral districts in the Lower Mainland, (one each in Vancouver, Surrey, the Fraser Valley and the Burnaby-Port Moody-Coquitlam area); and one new electoral district in the Okanagan region, from six districts to seven. "The net effect of the proposed changes is an increase of two electoral districts, bringing the proposed number to 81. The commission has also proposed boundaries for 20 B.C. single transferable vote (BC-STV) electoral districts with 81 MLAs." (Commission news release: Electoral Boundaries Commission submits proposals, August 15, 2007).

The proposed reduction of members in rural ridings resulted in strong public protest. This led Premier Gordon Campbell on October 24, 2007 to introduce the "Electoral Boundaries Commission Amendment Act 2007", Bill 39, which would preserve the status quo for rural representation and also direct the Commission to propose 87 electoral districts, an increase in eight new seats. This Liberal Government amendment failed to gain the support of the Opposition New Democratic Government. As a result, the Government withdrew the Bill, leaving the Commission to redraft its proposals under its original terms and constraints as mandated in the Electoral Boundaries Commission Act (R.S.B.C. 1996, c. 107). (Commission Information update, December 2007).
