

Budget 2019 Consultation

British Columbia is a province rich in people, resources, natural beauty and opportunities. However, opportunities have become further and further out of reach for too many people in our province. It's time for a different approach. Your new government is building a British Columbia that we can all be proud of.

The government of B.C. has made significant progress in its first year to secure a better future for your family. It has taken steps to make life more affordable, improve the services you rely on, and create a strong, sustainable economy throughout the province.

There are also challenges ahead that government needs to plan for, including financial pressures from wildfires, climate change, and instability from previous mismanagement of ICBC and the misuse of BC Hydro's deferral accounts. British Columbia continues to be among the strongest economic growth performers in the country. With prudent fiscal management, your government is working to address these challenges, while investing in you, your family, and your community.

Budgets are about people, and the choices we make today will shape the future of our province. That's why, looking ahead to Budget 2019, we want to hear about your priorities and how we can work together to build a strong, sustainable future for your family and your community.

BRITISH

HOUSING

Affordable housing benefits people, businesses and our economy, but many British Columbians still can't find an affordable place to call home.

That's why the government of B.C. is taking strong action to tackle the housing crisis by increasing supply, curbing speculative demand, establishing protections for renters and manufactured home owners, and addressing fraud and money laundering in B.C.'s real estate market.

These are the first steps to making housing more affordable; government will continue its work to moderate the housing market and create 114,000 homes over the next 10 years.

CHILDCARE

Reducing sky-high child care costs helps B.C. families get ahead, and helps businesses attract and retain employees. In Budget 2018, the government of B.C. made the largest investment in child care in the province's history — $1 billion over three years — to help build a quality child care system that is affordable and accessible, starting with:

- » Enabling two new programs — the Affordable Child Care Benefit and the Child Care Fee Reduction Initiative — that are already reducing the cost of child care for thousands of families.
- » Creating more than 22,000 new licensed child care spaces throughout the province.
- » Providing incentives for licensed service providers to offer child care outside of standard business hours.
- » Boosting support for early childhood educators to meet growing demand and rising quality standards.

SAVING YOU MONEY EACH AND EVERY DAY

For too long, British Columbians have been burdened with rising costs and fees, from bridge tolls to ferry fares and Medical Services Plan (MSP) fees. Over the past year, government has taken big steps to make life more affordable by:

- » Cutting MSP premiums by 50% as of January 2018 and eliminating them completely by 2020, saving families up to $1,800 per year and individuals $900 per year.
- » Eliminating unfair bridge tolls on the Port Mann and Golden Ears bridges.
- » Freezing or reducing ferry fares, and bringing back the 100% seniors' Monday to Thursday passenger discount.
- » Bringing down the costs of prescription drugs by reducing PharmaCare deductibles for people with incomes below $45,000 annually.
- » Restoring free bus passes for people receiving disability assistance.

LIFTING PEOPLE OUT OF POVERTY

Everyone deserves the opportunity to lead a stable and successful life. Too many people are working hard, and struggling to get ahead. That is why government is developing a Poverty Reduction Strategy that will lift people up and bring down barriers to opportunity.

This strategy will build on actions government has already taken to address people in the greatest need, including increases to assistance rates, and the creation of a new transportation supplement for people on disability assistance. It will also build on the government's work to address the housing crisis and make child care more accessible and affordable.

As part of government's commitment to take real, lasting and effective action to deliver opportunity and make life better for families, legislation will be introduced in Fall 2018 to support the Poverty Reduction Strategy.

DELIVERING THE SERVICES YOU COUNT ON

From health care for a loved one, to quality schools for our children, to keeping communities safe, British Columbians deserve services they can depend on.

To help patients get better, faster, more efficient health care, government has launched a new primary care strategy. At the heart of the strategy is a new focus on team-based care that will put patients back at the centre of health services.

British Columbia is also continuing to escalate its response to the overdose crisis through the newly established Ministry of Mental Health and Addictions. Working with community partners, government is now moving B.C. from a focus on emergency response, to a proactive, integrated and preventive approach that helps people when and where they need it.

When it comes to education, government is making sure British Columbians have access to the quality training and programs they need to succeed, and to help our province grow. From adding more student spaces and fast-tracking seismic upgrades, to eliminating tuition fees for Adult Basic Education and English Language Learning programs, as well as post-secondary tuition for former children in care, your government knows that investing in people means investing in the future.

WORKING TOWARD TRUE, LASTING RECONCILIATION

Underpinning all of our work is a shared commitment to reconciliation with Indigenous peoples and the adoption of the UN Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, the Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada's Calls to Action, and the Tsilhqot'in Supreme Court decision.

BUILDING A STRONG, SUSTAINABLE ECONOMY

A strong economy should work for everyone, not just the few at the top. Government is building a sustainable and innovative economy that works for you, your family, and your community.

Instead of looking to a singular sector to create jobs, we're building a diverse economy by strengthening resource industries like forestry, energy and mining, in addition to supporting small business, tourism, agriculture, manufacturing, innovation, tech and the digital economy. At the same time, we're building infrastructure to deliver the goods and services people need and that keep our province moving.

The B.C. government is providing businesses with the supports and services they need to help build a sustainable and innovative economy. Government has invested over $500 million to support B.C. businesses, including lowering the small business corporate income tax from 2.5% to 2% and eliminating the Provincial Sales Tax on non-residential electricity by April 2019.

And to support B.C.'s long-term economic success, government established the Emerging Economy Task Force, expanded the scope of the Innovation Commission, and named B.C.'s first Innovation Commissioner.

Climate change affects us all, and every British Columbian plays a part in building a vibrant, clean economy. We're taking action on climate change and building an economy that works for people today and tomorrow.

B.C. is among the top economic growth leaders in the country and is the only province to maintain a triple-A credit rating with all three international rating agencies.
