Lieutenant Governors of British Columbia 1871-Present

Updated April 2018

Introduction

General Document Notes

This publication was compiled for the convenience of Legislative Library staff. It was last reviewed and updated in 2018.

Much of the information in this document has been fact checked against The Men at Cary Castle by S. W. Jackman, newspaper articles, Privy Council Orders, the Canadian Parliamentary Guide, and the British Columbia and Canada Gazettes.

A list of suggested readings for further information on the role of the Lieutenant Governor is included at the end of this publication.

The Constitution Act, which creates the position of Lieutenant Governor and outlines its responsibilities and powers, does not use a hyphen in the term "Lieutenant Governor", so none has been used in this publication except when quoting sources which do use the hyphen.

Dates used in this document have been formatted as YYYY- MM-DD.

Within the references there are several sources listed to find biographical information if necessary.

Note on Terms Used

It is necessary to explain the choice of dates used for the terms of service of the Lieutenant Governors.

Date of Commission: In this publication "Date of Commission" refers to the date of the Privy Council order approving the appointment. The date used refers to the date of the first Privy Council order that refers to the individual.

Appointment Effective: In the early days, a commission was published in the British Columbia Gazette which specified the date on which the appointment was effective. This was not necessarily the same as, (and sometimes even preceded) the date on which the Lieutenant Governor was sworn in. Some commissions, in the form of Privy Council orders, specified a date on which the appointment took effect; others stated only that the appointment would take effect when the individual had been sworn in.

Sworn into Office: This date refers the date the Lieutenant Governor took the oath of office. This date is often the same date as the appointment takes effect but sometimes this date occurs after the appointment has taken effect.

End of Term: A previous Lieutenant Governor's term will end on the same day as either the new Lieutenant Governor's appointment takes effect or when they are sworn into office, which ever date is the earlier one.
